FRENCH AND GERMAN ARMIES FIGHT

FORCES OF TWO GREAT NATIONS SAID TO BE IN FIERCE CONFLICT

ITALY WILL NOT SELL HONOR DECLARES KING EMMANUEL

Rome, Aug. 10.—A statement attributed to King Victor Emmanuel in reply to the insistence of the representatives of Germany and Austria-Hungary who continually augmented their offers in order to obtain the active co-operation of Italy in the politics of the two empires has aroused much discussion in political circles here.

The King of Italy is said to have burst out with the exclamation:

"Neither friendship for my allies nor offers made by them no matter how advantageous would persuade me to sell my honor and that of my country."

Queen Helena with her children returned to the quinal today, as her majesty desired not to be far away from the king during the present grave situation. She said: "My place in case of danger is beside my husband."

Perhaps it can't be bought for as little as you had hoped; and perhaps it can. Read the "ads" and find out.

AUSTRIAN WARSHIPS RUSHED TO OTRANTO

Emperor of Germany Reported to Have Taken Command of the German Troops in the Field in the Vicinity of Aix la Chappelle—Bavarian Government Said to Have Told Germany She Had no Business to Become Involved in the War Between Austria and Serbia—Sinking of German Submarine and Drowning of Crew Confirmed by the British Admiralty.

(By International News Service.)
Paris, Aug. 10.—It is reported here that a great battle is being fought between French and German forces on the French and German frontier.

Austrian Ships Hasten to Otranto
Rome, Aug. 10.—Thirteen Austrian battleships and cruisers and sixteen torpedo boat destroyers are rushing at forced draught straight for Otranto.

It is reported that these vessels have been called to the aid of the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau, menaced by British warships.

To Incubate Cholera Victims.
Vienna, Aug. 10.—The government's cholera quarantine prevents wounded soldiers from coming to the capital.

A trainload of physicians and nurses have departed for the front. All soldiers who have been the victims of cholera will likely be incinerated.

Bavarians Protest Against War.
Brussels, Aug. 10.—The Vingtieme Sociale publishes the statement that the Bavarian government has wired the kaiser, protesting against Germany going to war.

The message states that Austria's war is with Serbia and there was no reason for Germany being involved in the conflict.

Battle Reported in Adriatic.
London, Aug. 10.—A Milan dispatch to the Daily Chronicle says that a steamship, which has arrived at Trieste, reports an engagement in the Adriatic sea. One hundred wounded, according to the report have been conveyed to Pola, the great naval port of Austria.

Pick of the British Army.
Paris, Aug. 10.—It was officially announced Saturday afternoon that 20,000 English troops already had landed at Ostend, Calais and Dunkirk.

They are proceeding toward Namur, to the west of Liege, on the main railroad line, to assist the Belgians.

The first British expeditionary force comprised some of the crack regiments of the British army. The troops were immediately landed under.

Ottawa, Canada, Aug. 10.—The bridge of the Lake St. John railway, at Lake Bouchette, was blown up today.

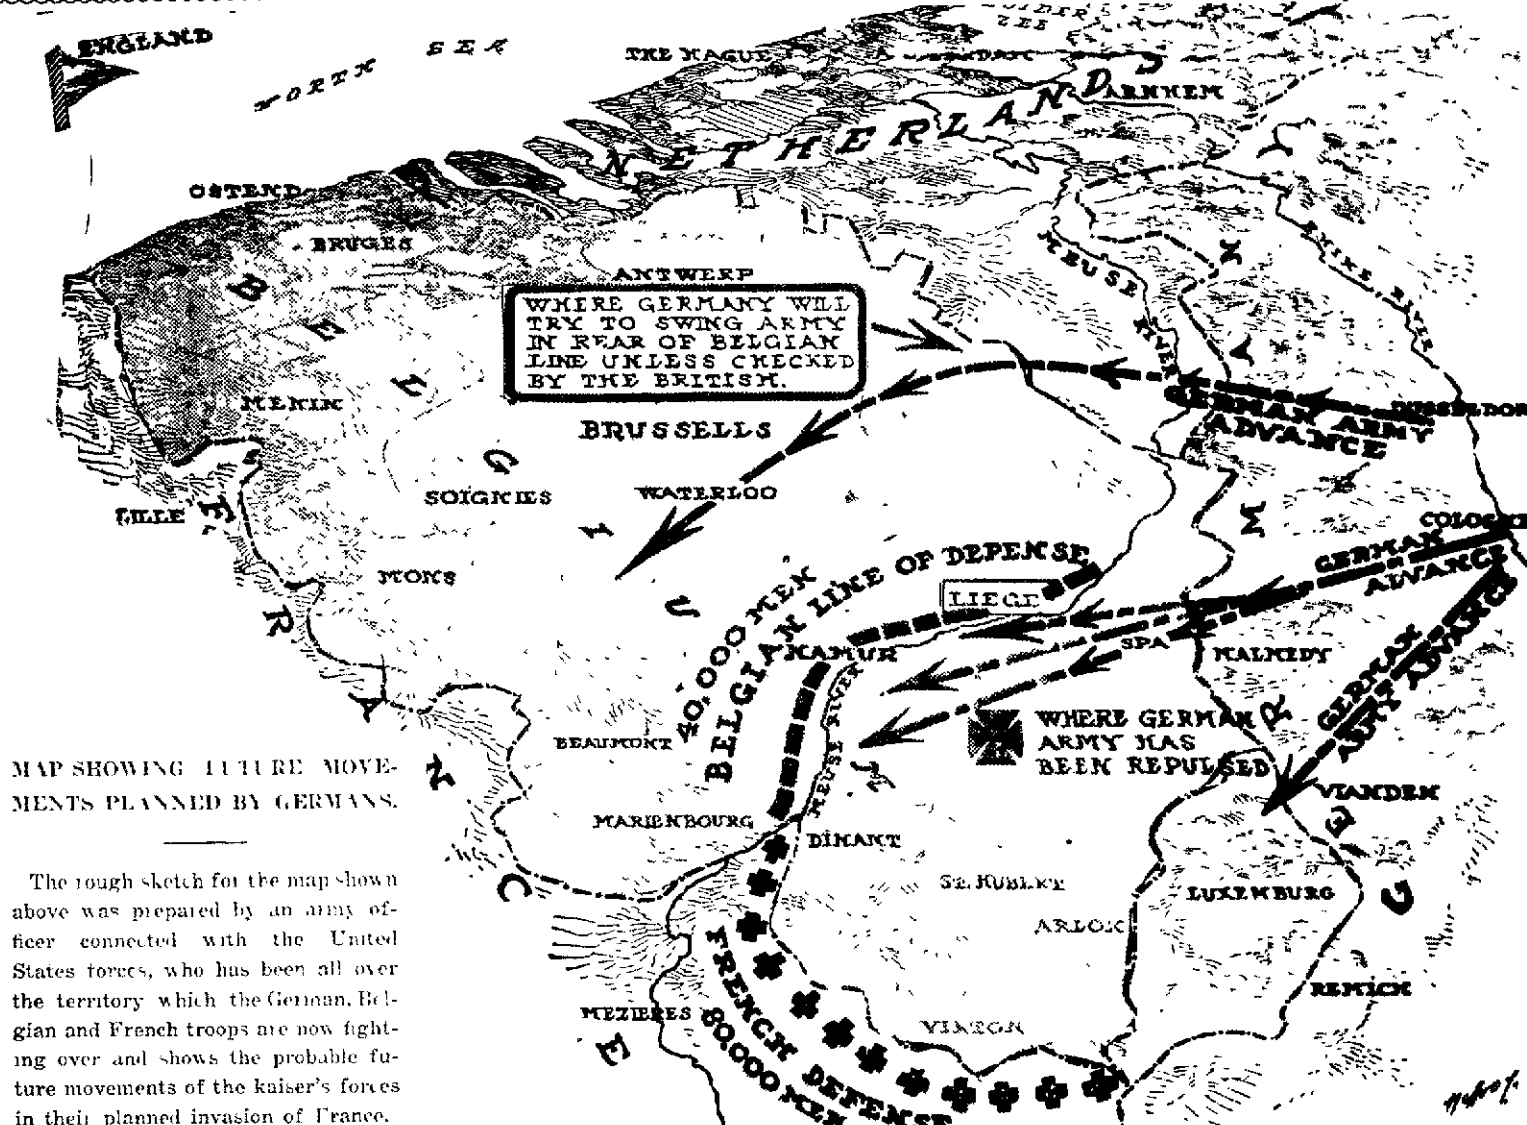

A German spy is reported to have been shot.

The war minister says the destruction of the bridge was to embarrass the Canadian mobilization of her army. Three persons were killed.

Insane Man Sought the President

(By International News Service.)
Amsterdam, Aug. 10, 3.30 P. M.—The Germans have driven the Belgians from the outer Liege forts.

Few Details Known.

London, Aug. 10.—Germany insisted yesterday that Liege had fallen, while Belgium announced that it still resisted the invaders.

From the conflicting reports, it seems probable that German troops have entered the city and driven out the Belgian infantry, but have been unable to reduce the forts. Between 3000 and 4000 Belgian prisoners are being sent back to Germany.

It is regarded as probable that the Germans have left enough soldiers to invest the fortifications and are marching to the south along the Meuse.

The allied French, Belgian and English troops are reported massed along the second line of defense. The next battle of importance is expected either at Huy or Namur.

Big Battle May Occur Very Soon

London, Aug. 10.—A dispatch to the Times from Berne, Switzerland, says 40,000 Austrian troops have concentrated near Basel, and that German and French troops also are near the Swiss frontier so that a big battle may occur at any moment.

The Daily Mail's home correspondent adds that, according to dispatches from Basel, Switzerland, the Germans have evacuated Hunk Ludwig, in Alsace, four miles northwest of Basel, and that a battle is imminent on the Franco-Swiss frontier.

Fear for Americans in the Mediterranean

(By International News Service.)

Washington, Aug. 10.—The battleship Maine has been ordered to remain at Gibraltar.

This order followed a conference between Secretary Bryan and Secretary Daniels. The administration is beginning to fear that Americans and their property are menaced in the Mediterranean.

Secretary Daniels, in denying the Tokio cable that an American fleet is expected in Asia, said:

"The navy is not preparing to go anywhere. We will keep all ships at home for some time to come."

DAVID HAGARTY DROPS DEAD AT HOME AT MADERA TODAY

David Hagarty, a well known resident of Madera, dropped dead of heart disease at his home this morning. He was about 55 years of age. Deceased leaves two daughters to mourn his death.

Mr. and Mrs. George McBride arrived home Saturday from their wedding trip.

45,000 Men Lost by French and Germans

Paris, Aug. 10.—Unofficial dispatches reached Paris yesterday saying that the French army which is invading Alsace and which broke through the German defenses at Altkirch Saturday morning and occupied the heavily fortified town of Muelhausen yesterday afternoon, has pushed on to Colmar, 22 miles beyond Muelhausen.

From the details received here, the Germans apparently made their stand at Altkirch, where they had thrown up entrenchments, rather than at Muelhausen, the capture of which is reported to have taken only about an hour after the French column arrived before the earthworks.

The French lost 15,000 men and the Germans 30,000, according to the reports which have come from the front in the fighting which preceded the capture of Altkirch, the chief losses being at the former town.

The war ministry today announced that only 100 French were killed and wounded at Muelhausen. The troops are still being held there.

SMALL WOODLAND OWN-

GIFFORD PINCHOT'S WORK FOR PRIVATE FORESTRY.

BY OVERTON W. PRICE.
Associate Forester, United States Forestry Service for Twelve Years—For
Two Years Engaged by the Canadian Government to Put the Control of the Crown Forests on a Business Basis.

Before Gifford Pinchot became forester to the United States Department
of Agriculture, he had already rendered pioneer service in both public
and private forestry. As the only forester on the committee appointed by the National Academy of Sciences
in 1896 to report to Hoke Smith, then Secretary of the U. S. Department of the Interior, a plan for forest policy
for the United States, he laid the foundations for the National Forest
policy which he was afterwards to administer as head of the U. S. Forest Service, with such brilliant success.

The report of the committee, while
alive to the need for the protection
of the forests owned by the National Government, ignored very largely the need to get them more fully used
and enjoyed by the western people.
Pinchot, with characteristic willingness to face any issue which involves
a principle, made a minority report
which laid strong emphasis upon the

assistant both in consulting forestry
and in the division of forestry, which
he left in 1900 to become director of
the Yale Forest School. This school
was founded by a donation of $150,000
and later supported by further contributions, including the building and
equipment for a summer school of forestry at Milford, Pike county
Pennsylvania, by Gifford Pinchot, his mother, his father, James W. Pinchot
and his brother, Amos Pinchot. Pinchot's wish has always been that his
home state should lead in forest education, and the requirements that
a summer school of forestry should be maintained at Milford, Pennsylvania, was an express condition of the gift to establish the Yale Forest School.

Helped Small Forest Owners.

But while Pinchot took prompt advantage, as in the case of Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr. Whitney, of opportunities offered by farsighted men of
large means for the establishment of
great object lessons in forestry, ever
as a consulting forester he put the stronger emphasis upon his work in
co-operation with smaller forest owners, realizing that upon them chiefly depends the future of American forests.

From the beginning of his professional career he gave a very large share of his active interest to wood-
lot forestry, not only because the farmer and the farm have always been near to his heart, but also because his forest work soon led to a keen appreciation of the need for better methods, in the interest of the farmers and of the Nation, of caring
for the patches of woodland which are usually an adjunct to the farm.

He was soon to have a wide field
for his activities in this and other phases of forestry, for in 1898 he was invited by President McKinley and
the Secretary of Agriculture, then
James Wilson, to take charge of the Forest Service of the Federal Government. The small force of the Division contained several experienced and able men; but its general
policy was such that it was contributing very little towards improving
methods of fire protection and of logging within that one-fourth of the United States which is still under forest cover.

Gave Farmers Expert Advice.

But Pinchot, fresh from the lumber
woods, with a vision which saw
straight to the grave public necessity
for forest conservation, and with that business-like and practical method of
approach upon forest problems which
had been the chief factor in his success with Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr.
Whitney, knew just what he wanted to do as United States Forester. Very soon after he assumed office the Division of Forestry made the expert
knowledge of its members directly
available to private forest owners,
great and small, by offering to prepare co-operative plans for the conservative management of their forest
holdings. This offer, which was thoroughly practical and definite in its
terms, entailed the execution of a contract providing that the Government should render expert assistance
and advice, and that the timber land owner should pay a fair part of the cost of the work.

But it is significant of Pinchot's
dominant interest on behalf of the small man, the guiding principle of all his work for Americans, that the
wood-lot owner, who is usually a small farmer, received the co-operation
of the Government without cost to
him. That was also thoroughly
fair, since wood-lot forestry involves
merely practical advice on the ground,
which usually can be given by an experienced man in a few hours.

He Helped Stop Wastes.

As the field of activity of the Division of Forestry widened under the stimulus of opportunity and leadership, new lines of work contributing directly to decreasing the drain on private forests in America was inaugurated. "Forests are destroyed not only by fires and bad logging," said Pinchot, "but the timber destroyed
by wasteful use is also worth saving." The result of that conviction
on his part is today a great forests
products laboratory at Madison, Wisconsin, the most advanced of its kind in the world. There experts and fore-est engineers are productively engaged in testing the strength of native timbers, in experimenting with timber preservatives for lengthening
the life of timber in use, and in a vast range of investigations looking
to the profitable manufacture of by-products from wood and the prevention of waste.

Nor did Pinchot stop his efforts to improve methods of private forestry
with work in the woods or in forest products investigations. He was the first man to advocate with really important results forest tax laws which would promote the conservative use
of forests rather than promote their destruction by an excessive tax burden on the timber crop. The recent forest tax laws enacted in Pennsylvania are among the achievements of his long campaign for general reform
in forest taxation, and had also his strong personal co-operation in the
steps incident to their passage.

Has Helped Lumbermen.

It is Pinchot again who leads in a much more recent movement now rapidly taking shape, for Federal legislation fair to the lumberman and fair
to the forests, which will insure the general practice of forestry on private forest lands in the United States. For
as he has pointed out, this question
of private forestry is an intensely practical one. This Nation faces
somewhere within fifty years unavoidable timber scarcity. It is using three times as much timber each year
as all our forests produce by yearly growth. If the present destructive methods of logging on private lands
continue the result will be not mere

timber scarcity, but timber famine.
Pinchot's conviction is that the next
great step ahead in forestry will be
some form of Federal requirement
for the practice of forestry by private
owners generally in the United States,
under methods which will insure to
them an adequate return for their enterprise and their investment, and
which will insure to the American people a constant supply of wood
from private forests conserved by wise use.

To make such requirements state
by state would make inequalities of competition, but to make them nationwide will do no one any harm.

Pinchot Stands With Public.

So Pinchot is found again on the side of the public, as a new stage of
the long fight begins for getting practical forestry into general effect on private forest lands. With him stand
not only other foresters, but a fast
increasing group of farsighted and
successful lumbermen themselves; men
who like John B. White, born in Pennsylvania, but now residing in Kansas City, see that the public interest and the private interest in the forest as elsewhere is fundamentally harmonious; and that what stands between most lumbermen and the practice of forestry is not danger of loss
through forestry, but failure to realize that true and constant profits from
the forest are to be had only through
the practice of forestry.

Men like Pinchot and John B. White
see that by making easy money quick
and destroying the forest by wasteful
logging methods and by indifference
to forest fires, the lumber industry is rapidly consuming itself; and that
cutting more and more lumber each
year to supply the extravagant demands of the United States, which
has the largest per capita lumber consumption in the world, does not necessarily mean that lumbermen are making more money each year, but often
the reverse.

Lumbermen like John B. White
want regulation of the lumber industry by the Nation, not only because they are patriotic, but also because they are wise men. And Gifford Pin-
chot is helping the American people
and the fair minded lumbermen to get it.

"How long will it take to get it?"
he was recently asked.

"Maybe ten years; possibly more or less," he replied. "But it will come.
The important thing is not only that
it should come as soon as possible,
but that it should be fair—fair to the people and the forests, and fair to the lumbermen."

HEALTH HINT FOR TODAY.

Uneven Shoulders.
Uneven shoulders make many
a girl fear to wear a halterneck
dress or low necked gown, because it makes this defect publicly conspicuous. For such corrective exercises are needed to remedy the trouble. Here is a hint that will prove valuable if persisted in daily: Stand erect
with the arms of the lower
shoulder raised above the head.
Grasp a heavy baton in the other hand and let this arm hang
at the side. Now push up vigorously with the upraised arm
and at the same time press down
with the hanging arm, keeping
the body and hips still and doing
all the movement with the shoulder muscles.

Getting Even.

"You are half an hour late this morning," said a schoolmaster to a scholar.
"Yes, sir," replied the boy, who had been "kept in" the day before. "It was late yesterday when I got home!"—

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements.
Of course it is important to know what President Wilson

IMPORTANT RULING BY THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

The public service commission has rendered an opinion in a complaint
about rates for shipping coal that
has interested people connected with scores of operations in Western Pennsylvania and held that it is "unlawful and inequitable" for the rate for shipment of coal in cars belonging to coal company, coal operator or coal producer to be lower than that
charged for the shipment of coal
in a car belonging to a railroad.
The case gets back pretty close to
the old private car complaint of
some years ago and was rendered in
the case brought against the Pennsylvania for its rate from Biddle, Irwin, Penn., and Hahntown to Jeannette and other points by the American Window Glass Company,
Pennsylvania Rubber Company, West
moreland Specialty Company, Mc-
Kee Glass Company and Pittsburgh
Lamp, Brass and Glass Company.
The rates of the company are reviewed and it is held that most of those effective on June 1 are not given, for some of the rates is in line haul and not a switching movement.

The commission decided that the rate to Grapeville and Biddle should not be higher than the rate to Jeannette and orders a reduction from 25 cents to 20 cents a ton; and that the rate of 30 cents a ton from Hahntown to Jeannette be reduced to 25 cents a ton. The rates of 15 cents
a ton from Penn to Jeannette and Grapeville and 20 cents a ton from Biddle to Jeannette are held to be reasonable.

sired building will be placed there.

No Free Transportation.
The Pennsylvania railroad, begin-

ing September 1, will discontinue the privilege heretofore extended to Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington commuters of free transportation
of market produce. Hereafter produce will be carried at the nominal
charges made for the transportation
of articles designed solely for home
or personal use.

During the past, when the suburban sections of the large cities were sparsely settled, the free carrying of
market produce was permitted for commuters, but now the management
feels that there is no longer any occasion to render free a service performed by the railroad at considerable expense, especially as no such privilege has been accorded any other
localities on the company's lines.

MAJORITY OF FANS ARE TIRED OF BASEBALL WAR

BY FRANG G. MENKE.
(By International News Service.)

New York, Aug. 10.—It's about time that Ban Johnson, John Tener and Jimmy Gilmore got together in some quiet corner and decide that their own interests would be served best by ending the baseball warfare.

The vast majority of fans are tired of the baseball war. They want peace. Give it to them and they'll soon be trekking back to the parks. They deserted the parks this year not so much because they have lost their love for the national game but in silent protest against the constant mud-slinging that the baseball conflict has caused.

The fans aren't vitally interested in law suits. They aren't interested in those. They don't care much about the merits of the ten day clause or the contract itself so long as they are sure of seeing baseball—of seeing the first class variety that sends the blood coursing a bit faster through the veins, that sends a thrill of delight chasing through the framework.

The fans aren't vitally interested much either in whether Ban Johnson thinks Jimmy Gilmore ought to be sent to Siberia for sixteen million years, or whether Gilmore thinks Garry Herrman isn't half as nice a fellow as he is himself. Such things might have been a bit diverting for a time, but that time has passed. They bore and they disgust.

Organized baseball has waged a bit of fight against the Feds. And ever the most bitter enemies of the Federal cannot deny the fact that "out-laws" have put up a game fight. They horned into a situation where even angels may have feared to tread. They found the enemy waiting with drawn clubs and loaded machine guns. But they waded right in.

It's nearly four months since the Feds ended their season. It was predicted they wouldn't last until May 1st. Then the prediction was shifted toward June 1. The next date for the blow-up was July 1, then July 15, then August 1. But there hasn't been any detonation.

The Feds have about $5,000,000 at stake and they aren't going to quit the battle, especially since they won out in the important Johnson and Chase law suits. Most of the magnates in the new league are plentifully supplied with money. They went into the new league proposition with their eyes open. They knew they wouldn't make much progress the first year, but they gambled on the succeeding years. It looks like a pretty good gamble at that.

There are some magnates within the confines of organized baseball who are wise men. In the last two months they have concluded that peace is a much cheaper proposition than warfare. And they are for peace and are trying to swing into line the magnates who are still keen for warfare.

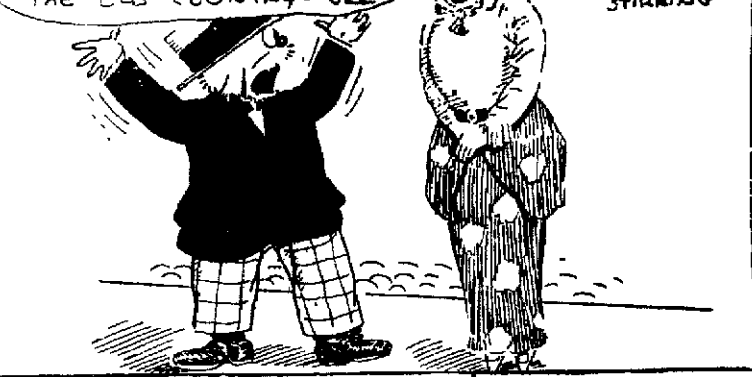

Most of the organized clubs will lose money this year. And even if the attendance does chirp up next year they are sure to suffer more losses if warfare continues, as the Feds are planning a new raid on the big stars. To keep these men the Organized Moguls will have to bid high. That means cluttering up the payroll with salaries so huge that they will overbalance the receipts.

Peace now before the players can get many more chances at playing both ends against the middle for big salaries will save the magnates many thousands of dollars. Or shall it be continuation of war that so far has proven futile and that gives little hope of being ultimately successful?

The Polo Champions.

The English polo team, of which the Duke of Mike, and the Earl of Jake are members, challenges Foxy Bean, manager of the American polo team, to a championship game to be played in America.

The Britishers after being properly decorated with the order of the Boston Garter by the Prince of Whales, leaves England's shore on the backs of their ponies, and swim across the Atlantic ocean. They arrive safely in America, and are greeted in a right royal fashion by the opposing team.

The great match is pulled off. Through the superior playing of the Duke of Mike and the Earl of Jake, the Britishers win the game. But the Americans resent what surely seems unfair methods displayed by their opponents and a "free-for-all" results. The Britishers, however, are saved by a number of American heiresses, who, witnessing the distress of the blue-bloods, rush to their rescue.

SHECKARD IS MAKING GOOD

Jim's Great Knowledge of Baseball is Causing Cleveland Team to Be Feared Around Circuit.

Measured by the standards of hard work, baseball brains and the attitude his players have toward him, Jim Sheckard, Spider manager, is one of the season's most successful new baseball leaders, despite the position of his club.

From the moment Sheckard steps on to the field until the last man is out, he's hard at work. Not a man goes to bat until Manager Jim has talked over with him the probable way he is to hit.

During practice Sheckard is always lifting 'em out to the fielders, fielding or coaching some of the youngsters. He has shown every man on the Cleveland team some new angle of the game. In exercising his functions as manager he's not at all bossy or arbitrary.

There isn't a man in the entire Spider crew who doesn't like Sheckard. It's the consideration he has shown every one of his men that has made him so well liked. Never grouchy, peeved or out of sorts, Sheckard makes himself liked by always having a pleasant word for anyone who approaches him.

WANTED: A Bright Young Man

A long established and reputable house — 40 years in business — has an opening in this city for a resident representative. His time will be largely his own; the work is pleasant and agreeable; his profit averages more than 33% on the business done, and previous experience is not essential. This is an ideal opportunity for a young man of good appearance, wide circle of acquaintance and a genuine desire to make good in a profitable field of work. The earliest reply will receive first consideration.

Good evening! Don't get excited; there will be no naval battles fought on the Susquehanna river.

The peace hall at the The Hague has been closed indefinitely.

Prices of foodstuffs are certain to go up, and even the price of wind pudding may rise.

The town of Limburger has been invaded by the enemy. Sad news for lovers of that delectable compound.

The female who is qualified to vote is the female who does not glance into plate glass windows to see if she looks all right.

Judging from the clothes they don't wear, no one would suspect that some of the girls of this town have attended finishing schools.

Somebody complain that the High school students are not fitted to take up the work of their lives. Well, we know several graduates of the High school who can roll a cigarette with one hand.

Clearfield county citizens would have a higher regard for the state fisheries department if the latter were to make it possible for game fish to live in the waters of the West Branch of the Susquehanna river.

Somehow or other, the names of Clearfielders generally sift to the bottom of the wheel when jurors are to be drawn. For the September term of court only about one Clearfield citizen in a thousand will sit on jury.

Curwensville had no difficulty in entertaining the Red Men last week, members of the local aerie being earnest in their praise of the hospitality of the citizens of the up-river town. The Red Men's picnic was a most enjoyable affair and the event passed off without a single unpleasant feature to mar the pleasure of the day.

HAS LIEGE FALLEN!
Without wishing to be one of those whom the emperor of Germany calls the "enemies of Germany," the average American citizen cannot but feel sympathy for the gallant band of forty thousand Belgians who for almost a week held at bay several hundred thousand of the kaiser's most experienced troops at Liege. The defense of that famous city by the handful of Belgians will go down in history as one of the most bravely and ably contested battles in which two nations have been pitted against each other.

It is announced from Berlin that Liege has fallen. If this be true the persistence of the Germans has won, but it is a victory which should bring tears of sorrow, rather than shouts of joy. At last twenty-five thousand German soldiers died in front of Liege. This means that at least ten thousand German women are widows and possibly forty thousand German children are fatherless. And these German soldiers were sacrificed—for what? That the war lord might gain one step in his long-contemplated wish to avenge himself upon his enemies.

The fall of Liege, if it has fallen, does not end the war in Belgium. The Germans must take other strongly entrenched positions, and when they reach other fortifications they will undoubtedly find that French and English troops have joined the Belgians and are ready to contest every step the kaiser's troops may take in their proposed march on France. The news from the various fields of action in the European war this week is likely to be far more interesting than that of last week, despite the strict censorship over what is transpiring that is maintained at the several capitals.

SCREEN THE GROCERIES.

It is gratifying to see that a number of Clearfield dealers have discovered that there is a way by which vegetables, fruits and other goods displayed in front of their stores may be protected against possible contamination from flies, dogs and other obnoxious things which attack perishable articles left standing in front of stores. The consumer of vegetables is more likely to deal with the merchant who keeps his goods clean and uncontaminated than from the merchant who carelessly displays his goods where they may be covered with flies and filth.

The slight expense necessary to the procuring of coverings for fruits placed on display is more than made up in the satisfaction that will come to the merchant in the knowledge that he has protected his goods. Citizens who deal at the local stores can do much toward advancing the cause of cleanliness by refusing to deal at the store where no effort is made to keep unwholesome and disease-breeding germs from their goods. Every store keeper should be only too willing to prove that he desires to keep his goods pure and free from filth of all kinds.

Giving Proper Credit.

Two Philadelphians were talking of the fortune of a third denizen of that city when one said:

His first lucky strike was in eggs. He bought 10,000 dozens at a low figure, put them in cold storage, and sold them at a profit of more than 30 per cent. That was the corner-stone of his great fortune.

Ah! exclaimed the other. Then the hens laid it!—Harper's Magazine.

It was a summer evening;
Old Kaspar's work was done,
And he before his cottage door
Was sitting in the sun;
And by him sported on the green
His little grandchild Wilhelmine.

She saw her brother Peterkin
Roll something large and round,
Which he beside the rivulet
In his playing there had found;
He came to ask what he had found,
That was so large and smooth and round.

Old Kaspar took it from the boy,
Who stood expectant by;
And then the old man shook his head,
And with a natural sigh,
"Tis some poor fellow's skull," said he
Who fell in the great victory."

"I find them in the garden,
For there's many hereabout;
And often when I go to plow,
The plowshare turns them out;
For many thousand men," said he,
"We're slain in the great victory."

"Now tell us what 'twas all about,"
Young Peterkin he cries;
And little Wilhelmine looks up
With wonder-waiting eyes;
Now tell us all about the war,
And what they fought each other for."

"It was the English," Kaspar cried,
"Who put the French to rout;
But what they fought each other for,
I could not well make out;
But everybody said," quoth he,
"That 'twas a famous victory."

"My father lived at Blenheim then,
Yon little stream hard by;
They burnt his dwelling to the ground
And he was forced to fly,
So with his wife and child he fled,
Nor had he where to rest his head."

"With fire and sword the country round
Was wasted far and wide,
And many a childing mother then,
And new-born baby, died,
But things like that, you know, must be
At every famous victory."

"They say it was a shocking sight
After the field was won;
For many thousand bodies there
Lay rotting in the sun;
But things like that, you know, must be,
After a famous victory"

Great praise the Duke of Malbora' won
And our good Prince Eugene,
"Why, 'twas a very wicked thing!"
Said little Wilhelmine.

"Nay, nay, my little girl," quoth he;
"It was a famous victory."
"And everybody praised the Duke,
Who this great fight did win."

"But what good came of it at last?"
Quoth little Peterkin.
"Why, that I cannot tell," said he;
"But 'twas a famous victory."

AN ORDINANCE.

Authorizing the construction of a sanitary sewer on Hannah and Olive Streets, in the Third Ward of the Borough of Clearfield, Pennsylvania, to extend from a point near the Lawrence Township line at the Western end of Hannah Street to the main sewer on Turnpike Avenue, and providing that the cost thereof be assessed back to the owners of the properties abutting on said streets.

Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Borough of Clearfield in Council regularly assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by authority of the same:

Section 1. That a public sanitary sewer be laid out, constructed and built on Hannah and Olive Streets in the Third Ward of the Borough of Clearfield, Pennsylvania, to extend from a point near the Lawrence Township line at the Western end of Hannah Street East along said street to Olive Street, thence along Olive Street, North to Hannah Street and thence along Hannah Street to the main sewer on Turnpike Avenue; said sewer to be constructed of terra cotta pipe and to be not less than eight inches in diameter; and when completed the cost thereof shall be assessed back to the owners of the real estate abutting on said streets, which assessment if not promptly paid shall be collected from said abutting property owners as provided by law.

Section 2. The Utilities Committee of the Town Council is hereby authorized to lay out, build and construct said sewer under the direction and supervision of the Borough Engineer, and when said sewer is constructed it shall become one of the public sewers of said borough, and shall be subject to all the rules and regulations for the control of the sewerage system of the Borough of Clearfield.

Ordained and enacted this fifth day of August, A. D. 1914.

FREDERICK B. KERR,
Attest. President of Council.

J. D. CONNELLY, Clerk of Council
Examined and approved this fifth day of August, A. D. 1914.

BIGLER TOWNSHIP WILL GET NEW STATE HIGHWAY

The state highway department will have some highway work done, beginning this coming fall.

There are eight applications, aggregating twelve and three fifths miles.

The first one of the applications upon which bids will be received is for 5,200 feet of highway in Bigler township, Clearfield county, from a point near the road leading to Pine run, easterly through the village of Madaga to the line between the Cornley-McCamley properties. This pavement, which is to be of brick blocks, of the standard width of 16 feet, is

This is the road the citizens of Madera have been working for, for some years.

LITTLE GIRL SERIOUSLY HURT BY AUTOMOBILE SUNDAY

Sara Helsey, the little daughter of Ralph Helsey, while walking with her uncle, Charles Hall, and his family Sunday evening near Hyde City became bewildered as an automobile from Punxsutawney came near them and was run over by the car. The child was run over by three wheels before the car could be stopped. Both bones in the right leg and one arm were broken and a hand crushed and three stitches were used to sew up a cut in her face. The doctor cannot yet assure the family that there are not internal injuries.

The accident happened just above Hyde City, near the home of Mrs. George Hall, where the child with her mother and father are living. She is being taken care of at the Hall home.

BALLOON ASCENSION TO BE SEEN ON LABOR DAY

CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN AT ONCE, HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Breathe Freely! Clears Stuffed-up Inflamed Nose and Head and Stops Catarrhal Discharges. Cures Dull Headache.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now. Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane, which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

Mr. Merchant:

Are you one of the wide awake "get there" class of merchants who knows a good thing when he sees it? Are you one of the lucky ones who is going to get in on the ground floor of the business of Clearfield? If you are not then it is up to you to get on the band wagon before the parade of good business starts, and the only way to let the people know that you are on earth and doing business is to

Advertise In The Progress

And just to prove to you that The Progress produces results for you, let us tell you what one of Clearfield's biggest merchants said of The Progress. His statement was that his advertising in The Progress had eliminated the use of hand bills entirely, and that he had seen direct returns from his advertising in this newspaper and in a most gratifying form.

The Progress

Goes into nearly every home in Clearfield and the surrounding territory. That is why this merchant gets the results that he can see. Let us prove it to you, or better yet, Make Us Prove It.

"The white woman must die," said Umballa, in a voice like one being strangled.

To this the priests agreed without hesitation. This white woman whom the people were calling a goddess was a deadly menace to that scepter of theirs, superstition.

"What has gone is a pact?"

"A pact, Durga Ram," said the chief priest. With Ramabal spreading Christianity, the abhorred creed which gave people liberty of person and thought, the future of his own religion stood in imminent danger. "A pact," he reflected. "To you, Durga Ram, the throne; to us half the treasury and all the ancient rites of our creed restored."

"I have said it."

Umballa followed the dancing girl into the square before the temple. He turned and smiled ironically. The bald fools!

"Lead on, thou flower of the jasmine!" lightly.

And the two of them disappeared into the night.

But the priests smiled, too, for Durga Ram should always be more in their power than they in his.

There was tremendous excitement in the city the next morning. It seemed that the city would never be permitted to resume its old careless indolence. Swift as the wind the news flew that the old king was alive, that he had been held prisoner all these months by Durga Ram and the now deposed Council of Three. No more the old rut of dullness. Never had they known such fetes. Since the arrival of the white goddess not a day had passed without some thrilling excitement, which had cost them nothing but shouts.

So they deserted the bazaars and markets that morning to witness the most surprising spectacle of all; the king who was dead was not dead, but alive!

So, in the throne room, later, he gave the power to Ramabal to act in his stead till he had fully recovered from his terrible hardships. More than this, he declared that Pundita, the wife of Ramabal, should ultimately rule! For of a truth the principality was lawfully hers. He would make his will at once, but in order that this should be legal he would have to destroy the previous will he had given to Colonel Hare, his friend.

"Forgive me, my friend," he said. "I acted unwisely in your case. But I was angry with my people for their cowardice."

"Your majesty," replied the colonel, "the fault lay primarily with me. I should not have accepted it or returned. I will tell you the truth. It was the filigree basket of gold and precious stones that brought me back."

"So? And all for nothing, since the hiding place I gave you is not the true one. But of that, more anon. I want this wretch Durga Ram spread out on an ant hill . . ."

And then, without apparent reason, he began to call for Lakshmi, the beautiful Lakshmi, the wife of his youth. He ordered preparations for an elephant fight; rambled, talked as though he were but twenty; his eyes dim, his lips loose and pendulous. And in this condition he might live ten or twenty years. Ramabal was sore at heart.

They had to wait two days till his mind cleared again. His first question upon his return to his mental balance was directed to Kathlyn. Where was the document he had given to his friend Hare? Kathlyn explained that Umballa had taken it from her.

"But, your majesty," exclaimed the colonel rather impatiently, "what difference does it make? Your return has nullified that document."

"Not in case of my death. And in Allah's elder document is always the legal document, unless it is legally destroyed. It is not well to antagonize the priests, who hold us firmly to this law. I might make a will in favor of Pundita, but it would not legally hold in justice if all previous wills were not legally destroyed. You must find this document."

"Did you ever hear of a law to equal that?" asked Bruce of the colonel.

"No, my boy, I never did. It would mean a good deal of red tape for a man who changed his mind frequently. He could not fool his relations; they would know. The laws of the dark peoples have always amazed me, because if you dig deep enough into them you are likely to find common sense at the bottom. We must search Umballa's house thoroughly. I wish to see Ramabal and Pundita in the shadow of their rights. Can't destroy a document off-hand and make a new one without legally destroying the first. Well, let us be getting back to the bungalow. We'll talk it over there."

systematically being prepared for the homeward journey. The laughter and chatter of the two girls was music to their father's ears. And sometimes he intercepted secret glances between Bruce and Kathlyn. Youth, youth; youth and love! Well, so it was. He himself had been a youth, had loved and been loved. But he grew very lonely at the thought of Kathlyn eventually going into another home; and some young chap would soon come and claim Winnie, and he would have no one but Ahmed. If only he had had a boy, to bring his bride to his father's roof!

Pictures were taken down from the walls, the various wild animal heads, and were packed away in strong boxes. And Ahmed went thither and you, a hundred cares upon his shoulders. He was busy because then he had no time to mourn Lal Singh.

Bruce's camp was, of course, in utter ruin. Not even the cooking utensils remained; and of his men there was left but Ali, whose leg still caused him to limp a little. So Bruce was commanded by no less person than Kathlyn to be her father's guest till they departed for America. Daily Winnie rode Rajah. He was such a funny old pachyderm, a kind of clown among his brethren, but as gentle as a kitten. Running away had not paid. He was like the country boy who had gone to the big city; he never more could be satisfied with the farm.

The baboon hung about the colonel's heels as a dog might have done; while Kathlyn had found a tiger cub for a plaything. So for awhile peace reigned at the camp.

They found the much-sought document in the secret chamber in Umballa's house (just as he intended they should); and the king had it legally destroyed and wrote a new will, wherein Pundita should have back that which the king's ancestors had taken from hers—a throne.

After that there was nothing for Colonel Hare to do but proceed to ship his animals to the railroad, thence to the ports where he could dispose of them. Never should he enter this part of India again. Life was too short.

High and low they hunted Umballa, but without success. He was hidden well. They were, however, assured that he lingered in the city and was sinisterly alive.

Day after day the king grew stronger mentally and physically. Many of the reforms suggested by Ramabal were put into force. Quiet at length really settled down upon the city. They began to believe that Umballa had fled the city, and vigilance correspondingly relaxed.

The king had a private chamber, the window of which overlooked the garden of brides. There, with his sherbets and water pipe he resumed his old habit of inditing verse in pure Persian, for he was a scholar. He never entered the zenana or harem; but occasionally he sent for some of the women to play and dance before him. And the woman who loved Umballa was among these. One day she asked to take a journey into the bazaars to visit her sister. Ordinarily such a request would have been denied. But the king no longer cared what the women did, and the chief eunuch slept afternoons and nights, being only partly alive in the mornings.

An hour later a palanquin was lowered directly beneath the king's window. To his eye it looked exactly like the one which had departed. He went on writing, absorbed. Had he looked closely, had he been the least suspicious . . .

This palanquin was the gift of Durga Ram, so-called Umballa. It had been built especially for this long-awaited occasion. It was nothing more nor less than a sunning cage in which a tiger was huddled, in a vile temper. The palanquin bearers, friends of the dancing girl, had overpowered the royal bearers and donned their costumes. At this moment one of the bearers (Umballa himself, trusting no one!) crawled stealthily under the palanquin and touched the spring which liberated the tiger and opened the blind. The furious beast sprang to the window. The king was too astonished to move, to appreciate his danger. From yon harmless palanquin this striped fury!

The tiger in his leap struck the lacquered desk, broke it and scattered the papers about the floor.

Ramabal and his officers were just entering the corridor which led to the chamber when the tragedy occurred. They heard the noise, the king's cries. When they reached the door silence greeted them.

The room was wrecked. There was evidence of a short but terrific struggle. The king lay dead upon the floor, the side of his head crushed in. His turban and garments were in tatters. But he had died like a king; for in the corner by the window lay the striped one, a jeweled dagger in his throat.

Ramabal was first to discover the deserted palanquin, and proceeded to investigate. It did not take him more than a minute to understand what had happened. It was not an accident; it was cold-blooded murder, and back of it stood the infernal ingenuity of one man.

Death of the Real King of Allaha.

Thus fate took Allaha by the hair again and shook her out of the pastoral quiet. What would happen now? This!

On the morning after the tragic death of the old king, those who went early to worship, to propitiate the gods to deal kindly with them during the day, were astounded to find the doors and gates of all the temples closed! Nor was any priest visible in his usual haunts. The people were stunned. For there could be but one interpretation to this act on the part of the gurus: the gods had denied the people. Why? Wherefore? Twenty-four hours passed without their learning the cause; the priests desired to fill them with terror before they struck.

Then came the distribution of pamphlets wherein it was decreed that the populace, the soldiery, all Allaha, in fact, must bow to the will of the gods or go heretofore accursed. The gods demanded the reinstatement as regent Durga Ram; the deposing of Ramabal, the infidel; the fealty of the troops to Durga Ram; 24 hours were given the people to make their choice.

Before the doors of all the temples the people gathered, wailing and pouring dust upon their heads, from Brahmin to pariah, from high caste matrons to light dancing girls. And when the troops, company by company, began to kneel at the outer rim of these gatherings, Ramabal dispatched a note to Colonel Hare, warning him to fly at once. But the messenger tore up the note and flew to his favorite temple. Superstition thus won what honor, truth and generosity could not hold.

Allaha surrendered; and Umballa came forth.

All this happened so quickly that not even a rumor of it reached the colonel's bungalow till it was too late. They were to have left on the morrow. The king dead, only a few minor technicalities stood in the way of Ramabal and Pundita.

Bruce and Kathlyn were fencing one with the other, after the manner of lovers, when Winnie, her eyes wide with fright, burst in upon them with the news that Umballa, at the head of many soldiers, was approaching. The lovers rushed to the front of the bungalow in time to witness the colonel trying to prevent the intrusion of a priest.

"Patience, sahib!" warned the priest.

The colonel, upon seeing Umballa, made an attempt to draw his revolver, but the soldiers prevented him from carrying into execution his wild impulse.

The priest explained what had happened. The Colonel Sahib, his friend Bruce Sahib and his youngest daughter would be permitted to depart in peace; but Kathlyn Memsahib must wed Durga Ram.

When the dazed colonel produced the document which had been legally canceled, Umballa laughed and declared that he himself had forged that particular document, that the true, which he held, was not legally destroyed.

Burning with the thought of revenge, of reprisal, how could Durga Ram know that he thus dug his own pit? Had he let them go he would have eventually been crowned, as surely as now his path led straight to the treadmill.

Ahmed alone escaped, because Umballa had in his triumph forgotten him!

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Woman Scorned.

There is an old saying in Rajput that woman and the four winds were born at the same time, of the same mother: blew hot, blew cold, balmily or tempestuously, from all points at once. Perhaps. In the zenana of the royal palace there was a woman, tall, lithe, with a skin of ivory and roses and eyes as brown as the husk of a water chestnut. On her bare ankles were gem-encrusted anklets, on her arms bracelets of hammered gold, round her neck a rope of pearls and emeralds and rubies and sapphires. And still she was not happy.

From time to time her fingers strained at the roots of her glossy black hair and the whites of her great eyes glistened. She bit her lips to keep back the sobs crowding in her throat. She pressed her hands together so tightly that the little knuckles cracked.

"Al, al!" she wailed softly.

She paced the confines of her chamber with slow step, with fast step; or leaned against the wall, her face hidden in her arms; or pressed her hot cheeks against the cool marble of the lattice.

Human nature is made up of contraries. Why, when we have had the courage coolly to plan murder, or to aid or suggest it, why must we be troubled with remorse? More than this, why must we battle against silly impulse to tell the first we meet what we have done? Remorse: what is it?

Now, this woman of the zenana believed not in the God of your fathers and mine. She was a pagan; her heaven and hell were ruled by a thousand gods, and her temples were filled with their images. Yet this thing remorse, was stabbing her with its hot needles, till no torture devised by man could equal it.

She was the poor, foolish woman who loved Durga Ram; loved him as these wild Asiatic women love, from murder to the poisoned cup. Loved him, and knew that he loved her not, but used her for his own selfish ends. There you have it. Had he loved her, remorse would have been a thing of

had not Umballa sought the white woman, this butterfly of the harem might have died of old age without unbending her soul. Remorse is the result of a crime committed uselessly. Humanity is unchangeable, for all its variety of skins.

And here was this woman, wanting to tell some one!

Umballa had done a peculiar thing: he had not laid hand upon either Ramabal or Pundita. When asked the reason for this generosity toward a man who but recently put a price on his head, Umballa smiled and explained that Ramabal was not only broken politically, but was a religious outcast. It was happiness for such a person to die, so he preferred that, Ramabal should live.

Secretly, however, Ramabal's revolutionary friends were still back of him, though they pretended to bow to the yoke of the priests.

So upon this day matters stood thus: the colonel, Kathlyn, Bruce and Winnie were prisoners again; Ahmed was in hiding; and Ramabal and his wife mocked by those who once had cheered them. The ingratitude of kings is as nothing when compared to the ingratitude of a people.

A most ridiculous country: to crown Kathlyn again (for the third time!) and then to lock her up! Next to superstition as a barrier to progress there stands custom. Everything one did must be done as some one else had done it; the initiative was still

Elegant Blouses in Voile and Organdy

ONE of the handsomest of the many beautiful lingerie blouses which have added so much to the beauty of apparel this summer, is very clearly pictured here. It is made of fine organdy and depends for its effectiveness upon the fineness of the fabric and the faultlessness of the work as well as upon a fine choice of lace and embroidery used in decorating.

The upper part of the blouse is cut in kimono fashion from a piece of the organdy tucked in squares, in tucks an eighth of an inch wide. A panel is set in at the back and front of the plain organdy. Cluny lace edging or some other equally good lace, is used in setting in these panels. The lower part of the blouse back and front is of the plain fabric.

Whenever the plain organdy is used a dainty design in hand embroidery chained up in the temples, it belonged to the bald priests only.

But Umballa had made two mistakes: he should have permitted the white people to leave the country and given a silken cord to the chief eunuch to apply as directed. There are no written laws among the dark peoples that forbid the disposal of that chattel known as a woman of the harem, or zenana. There are certain customs that even the all powerful British raj must ignore.

ery adorns it. The collar is finished with small embroidered scallops and the flower design, appearing on the waist elsewhere, is repeated here. The collar is wired with the finest of wire to support it at the back.

A waist cut on somewhat similar lines and made of figured voile is shown in the second picture. In this model all seams are joined with a piping of cord covered with the material. There is a vest of plain white net and a collar of net and lace. Pearl buttons fasten the vest and small bows of satin, matching the flower in the voile, add a pretty color note and a smart finish.

Both these models are finished at the waist line with a narrow belt which sets under the skirt. There is very little work on the blouse of voile but the daintiness of the fabric, showing lavender flowers on a white ground and the fineness of the plain net in vest and collar, produce an effect of elegance almost equal to that in the elaborate blouse of organdy.

"CUPID'S VICTORY" FULL OF AMUSING SITUATIONS

Drummer Jones makes his annual trip West. He stays at the Thatch hotel, run by Louise's mother. Ike is janitor of the hotel. He and Louise are sweethearts.

After the trunk is placed in the drummer's room he unpacks his samples. Louise has been watching from her room. When she sees her way clear, she hides herself in the trunk. When Ike returns with the second trunk Louise informs him of her plan. Ike is to look it up, and they are to elope to the city.

All these preparations are made outside the drummer's door, who overhears the conversation, but pays no attention to it until he hears a disturbance in the office and inquires of its cause. In the meantime Ike has almost forgotten his last orders from Louise, "Not to forget her pet goat." Ike gets it and all three mount the train for the city.

At the hotel Louise is missed, and her parents are informed by the drummer of what he overheard. They get the sheriff and start in pursuit. On the train Ike, Louise and the goat are getting along fine until approached by the train newsboy. The goat decides to make a clean-up. As a result the boy and Ike get into a fight.

Louise has trouble with a strange man occupying the upper berth. At last everything rights itself and they arrive next morning in the city. A hotel porter thinks Ike and Louise are coming to his hotel and grabs their suit case. Ike gives chase with a gun. The old folks arrive and continue the chase. The goat gets sick and Louise and Ike start to take it to a hospital. On the way to the station they meet her mother and father and the sheriff. The sheriff claims Ike as his prisoner. Mother takes a hand and knocks the cop down, get the pair and starts on her way, leaving the cops much the

All at Sea.

Alice Moore prefers young Bob Chester. Father and mother can't seem to agree with her. The Moores are spending the summer at Venado Beach. Bob is at the nearby Tent City. At last the situation in the minds of Mr. and Mrs. Moore, becomes desperate, and they decide to take their daughter back to San Francisco. Alice determines to outwit them, and is secretly married to Bob. Alice's brother arrives. Then greeting is effusive. Bob is jealous.

The whole party leaves on ship-board for the northern city. Alice, angry that Bob doubted her love, will not tell who her brother is. Bob disguises as a steward to avoid her parents' wrath.

Complications galore arise. Brother is angered at the presumptuous steward and his sister's disgraceful flirtation with him. Mr. and Mrs. Moore suddenly discover the identity of the steward. Then trouble certainly does follow. At last, however, things come straight. The secret of the marriage comes out. Everybody is forgiven and the picture fades as the sun goes down.

The Most Extraordinary Moving Picture Production of the Times

The Trey O' Hearts

If you've got a drop of red blood in your veins—if your heart beats one bit faster to the tune of romance—adventure—love and mystery—then you've something in store so far ahead of anything you've ever seen that you will never forget.

The Pictures The Universal Film Manufacturing Co., pronounced THE TREY O' HEARTS the best action story for film purposes they had seen in three years. They backed up their judgment by putting the punch and $200,000 cash into a set of pictures that are more than remarkable—they're simply extraordinary.

Won't Cost You One Red Penny You attend the movies—regularly. Instead of an ordinary film, you'll see graphically pictured by the best emotional actors and actresses in America—THE TREY O' HEARTS—a pace maker in pictures. So it won't cost you a nickel more to see it.

Mental Back Somersaults No matter how clever, you can't fathom the plot of THE TREY O' HEARTS one inch ahead of the scene you're viewing. It keeps you turning mental back somersaults all the way.

Full Reel Action in Every Foot The Universal Film Manufacturing Co., who are producing these films tell us that there is more action in every foot of THE TREY O' HEARTS than in a full reel of the ordinary scenario. And they should know. Thousands of scenarios go through their hands every year and they're investing $200,000 in putting THE TREY O' HEARTS on the screen. That's backing judgment. And their success in the moving picture business tells whether or not they know a good thing when they see it.

"The Trey O' Hearts" Is the Moving Picture Play You Want to See. Produced in Weekly Installments at

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Simple Funeral Services for President's Wife

(By International News Service.)
Washington, Aug. 10.—Nearly 200 persons, including a congressional delegation, attend Mrs. Wilson's funeral services in the East room of the white house at 2 P. M. today. The services were simple throughout, the ritual following the Presbyterian tradition.
Rev. Sylvester Beach, of Princeton, officiated, assisted by Rev. James P. Taylor, of the Central Presbyterian church, Washington.
The family group included, besides the president, Secretary of Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowles Sayre, Miss Margaret Wilson, Prof. Stockton Axson, (Mrs. Wilson's brother), Joseph R. Wilson, George Howe and Edward Wilson. The funeral party departed for Rome, Ga., at 4:30 P. M.

FRENCH CAPTURE TOWN IN ALSACE

The French troops took the village a place of nearly 4,000 inhabitants. The German forces retreated, pursued by the French troops in the direction of the great fortress of Muehlhausen.
The Alsatian natives were so delighted at the arrival of the French soldiers that they tore up the frontier posts.
In the extreme north the French from Nancy have clashed with the Germans at a point inside of Luxembourg. The war office claims a victory in the preliminary skirmishing and says the engagement has taken on the proportions of a general battle.
Muehlhausen is the second largest town of Alsace-Lorraine and is 61 miles to the south, southwest of Strassburg, the capital. It became a free city of the German empire in 1273; in the fifteenth century it entered into an alliance with the Swiss which lasted until 1793, when the city became French. It was taken from the French in September, 1870, and was ceded to Germany, with Alsace, in 1871.
Muehlhausen is garrisoned by a full infantry brigade, comprising about 9,000 men, and a full cavalry brigade of about 2,500. It has a population of about 100,000 and is the principal seat of cotton spinning in western Germany.

has been landed at Ekenas and is marching on Helsingfors, the capital of Finland.
The Germans have been opposed by Russian troops, but are persisting in the advance and it is expected that Helsingfors will be taken.
The movement is preliminary to a general invasion of Russia by Germany.
From Helsingfors to St. Petersburg there is a direct line of railway along which it is expected the Germans will advance.
Austrians Invade Russia.
St. Petersburg, Aug. 10.—Austrian troops crossed the Russian frontier near the Rumanian border Saturday and burned some villages.
The German fleet in the Baltic sea consists of at least 12 battleships of an old type, several cruisers and 24 torpedo boats, and has its base at Koenigsburg and Danzig. Up to the present none of the vessels has come northward to Libau.

QUESTION OF SCHOOL BOARD'S RIGHTS BEFORE JUDGE BELL

The matter of objections of DuBois citizens to the granting permission to the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Ancient Order of Hibernians to use the auditorium of the DuBois High school for their sessions at the A. O. H. convention next week, was heard before Judge Bell this morning.
In June the school board of DuBois granted the ladies' auxiliary permission to occupy the auditorium. Subsequently protests against this action were made by the Knights of Malta and taxpayers. These protests were considered by the school board on Monday, August 3, and it was decided by the directors that they would not change their former action.
The petitioners then decided to take the matter before Judge Bell on the question of the legal right to permit a semi-sectarian organization to hold its meetings in a school building. Witnesses on both sides were examined by L. B. McCall, borough solicitor for the petitioners and J. P. O'Laughlin and James Gleason for the school directors.
At the conclusion of the testimony and the argument Judge Bell took the papers and will render a decision later.

CLEARFIELD AERIE OF EAGLES WILL HOLD BASKET PICNIC

The Clearfield aerie of Eagles will hold their tenth annual basket picnic at the Driving park, Thursday, Aug. 13. The High school band will furnish music for the occasion. Addresses will be made by Judge Bell and several other prominent speakers beginning at three o'clock. There will be two interesting games of ball between two Clearfield teams. In the afternoon and evening music will be furnished by the Guliches. There will be a greased pole contest between Sapho Holt and Dan Brenner.
At 1:30 there will be a motorcycle race between John P. Smith and Ralph Jordan. The bicycle race will follow with Butler, Heavener, McKeen and many others listed as contestants. The first prize in this contest will be a bicycle lamp; the second an electric horn. Piney Rook, Joe Smith, Fred Thorn, Fred Lee and John McCorkle will be the contestants in the potato race. In the fat man's race Chief McHenry, William Montague, Edward Williams, Skinny Connelly, and "Pa" Sacketts will take part. Frances Butler and Sanford Thompson will take part in the boys' foot race. The first prize will be a pocket knife; the second a whistle. In the girls' foot race the first prize will be a tennis racket and ball.
All Eagles are requested to bring their friends. Everything is free and everybody is welcome. The committee has arranged to call for return baskets. Have your basket ready and notify the Eagles' home when to call for it.

GERMANY PREMEDITATED WAR IS DECLARATION OF FRANCE

Paris, Aug. 10.—An official statement issued yesterday says that German mobilization posters on walls in the towns of Vic and Moyenvic, in Alsace-Lorraine, prove that the war was premeditated on the part of the Germans.
The towns were occupied by the French Friday and according to the statement the posters which they found afforded them valuable information concerning Germany's mobilization, besides revealing that Germany had decided upon war at the time the Triple Entente was redoubling its efforts for peace.

AMERICAN PROFESSOR AND WIFE ARRESTED IN GERMANY

(By International News Service.)
Washington, Aug. 10.—Confirmation of the arrest and imprisonment of Arthur M. Huntington, president of the American Geographic society, and wife, by the German authorities was sent to the state department by Ambassador Herrick today.
Paris, Aug. 10.—The Huntingtons are confined to the Grand hotel, at Nurnberg. Herrick is negotiating for their release. No mention is made of alleged brutalities inflicted on them.

HEARING TESTIMONY IN CURWENSVILLE CASES

This afternoon testimony is being taken in the rehearing granted to Thomas Casey and Dorsey Griffith, of Curwensville, the hotel keepers, whose applications for liquor licenses were refused in March.
Messrs. Casey and Griffith asked the court sometime ago for a rehearing and Judge Bell, in order to give both sides an opportunity to be heard, set today at 1:30 for the taking of testimony. Witnesses are being heard as the Progress goes to press.
A large delegation of Curwensville people, a number of women among them, came down on the train and were interested spectators during the hearing.

der the direction of the French officers who had been sent by the war office for that purpose. The troops will be hurried to Namur, where they are to aid the Belgians in making their second stand when Liege proves untenable.
The announcement that the British forces are actually on French soil has aroused the greatest enthusiasm. That French, Belgian and English soldiers are to fight shoulder to shoulder against the invading Germans means much to the French.
Italy is Threatened.
Rome, Aug. 10.—Germany and Austria threaten Italy with the declaration that the latter persists in its stand of neutrality they will consider themselves free to declare war and Austria will invade Venetia and Lombardy.
Four British Warships Sunk.
New York, Aug. 10.—Private cable advices received in New York report that a flotilla of German torpedo boats has attacked British warships in the Humber, the waterway to Hull, on the east coast of England sinking four of them. A number of the attacking German torpedo boats were lost.

German Cruiser Destroyed.
Paris, Aug. 10.—A dispatch published by the Petit Parisien says that the German cruiser Augsburg which bombarded the Russian port of Libau, has been sunk by a Russian torpedo boat. It carried 379 men.
Russians Capture Austrian Ships.
St. Petersburg, Aug. 10.—The Austrian merchant steamer Stella has been captured by Russian warships.
German Merchant Ship Captured.
Shanghai, Aug. 10.—Russian warships have captured the German merchantman Sabine Rickmers at the mouth of the Amur river. The Deike Rickmers, another German merchantman, after an exciting run from Hong Kong, arrived here safely Saturday.

Austrian Troops Retreat.
Nish, Serbia, Aug. 10.—The Austrian troops have evacuated Visegrad on the frontier of Novipazar. The Serbian troops immediately occupied the place.
Italians Take German Liners.
London, Aug. 10.—A dispatch from Milan to the Chronicle says that the Italian authorities at Genoa have seized two German trans-Atlantic vessels, the Moltke and the Koenig Albert. It is explained that the action was taken when the captains demanded a supply of coal though they already had coal aboard.
The Koenig Albert belongs to the North German-Lloyd line and sailed from New York, July 4, and arrived at Genoa July 17. The Moltke is a Hamburg-American liner. She left New York on July 15, arriving in Genoa on the 28th.

Germans March on France.
Brussels, Aug. 10.—Fifty thousand Germans departed today for Esch, Luxembourg and invaded France. A large percentage were fresh cavalry from Berlin.
Germany Claims Victory.
Berlin, Aug. 10.—The war office states:
"All preliminary aims have been accomplished. The Russian advance has been thrown back. The imperial army ready to advance, though General Von Emmich's forces are delayed at Liege. He won a glorious victory, capturing one thousand prisoners. The German losses were slight."

London, Aug. 10.—Dispatches to the Exchange Telegraph company today, announce that the kaiser formally took up a position with field forces at Aix-La-Chapelle.
The admiralty confirms the sinking of the German submarine U 15 while the latter was attempting to attack the British warships. The submarine's crew of 12 men were drowned. No details are made public.

Attempt to Delay French.
Paris, Aug. 10.—It is officially stated that the Germans are attempting to delay the French advances upon Metz by inundating the valley of River Seille, which flows along the frontier midway between Metz and the French fortress at Nancy.

MINISTER AND MAID EXCHANGE
SUIT CASES WHILE TRAVELING
The DuBois Courier tells the following interesting tale of a minister and maid.
Rev. Mr. Smith, pastor of the Baptist church, at Sykesville, was traveling Saturday last and had occasion to stop at Falls Creek while changing cars for his destination. At the same time Miss Simmons, stenographer for the Falls Creek glass works, was also traveling, being headed for Clearfield, to visit friends over Sunday. The reverend gentleman and Miss Simmons were strangers to each other, but their suit cases were exactly alike. While awaiting for their trains they set their traveling bags down in the station and strolled around.
When the Rev. Smith's train arrived he gathered up a suit case and departed. Miss Simmons did likewise. When the reverend reached his destination to fill a Sunday appointment he opened his suit case and was considerably surprised to find it filled with women's wearing apparel, including the fixings and things usually found in a young lady's outfit, and none of which he had any use for at that time. Being rather modest and somewhat embarrassed he closed up the case and started the telephone working back to Falls Creek.
Miss Simmons arrived safely at Clearfield carrying the preacher's suit case and Sunday outfit, which she soon discovered after her arrival. She did not know whose baggage she had hypothecated, but she did know she had connected with it at Falls Creek station. Hence she also hurried to a telephone booth and for the next half hour kept the lines hot between Clearfield and Falls Creek. Before evening the mixup in suit cases was cleared up and everybody happy.

FRENCH AND GERMAN ARMIES FIGHT

FORCES OF TWO GREAT NATIONS SAID TO BE IN FIERCE CONFLICT

ITALY WILL NOT SELL HONOR DECLARES KING EMMANUEL

Rome, Aug. 10.—A statement attributed to King Victor Emmanuel in reply to the insistence of the representatives of Germany and Austria-Hungary who continually augmented their offers in order to obtain the active co-operation of Italy in the politics of the two empires has aroused much discussion in political circles here.

The King of Italy is said to have burst out with the exclamation:

Queen Helena with her children returned to the quinal today, as her majesty desired not to be far away from the king during the present grave situation. She said: "My place in case of danger is beside my husband."

Perhaps it can't be bought for as little as you had hoped; and perhaps it can. Read the "ads" and find out.

AUSTRIAN WARSHIPS RUSHED TO OTRANTO

Emperor of Germany Reported to Have Taken Command of the German Troops in the Field in the Vicinity of Aix la Chappelle—Bavarian Government Said to Have Told Germany She Had no Business to Become Involved in the War Between Austria and Serbia—Sinking of German Submarine and Drowning of Crew Confirmed by the British Admiralty.

(By International News Service.)
Paris, Aug. 10.—It is reported here that a great battle is being fought between French and German forces on the French and German frontier.

The Germans are supposedly those which arrived at early dawn. The French war office refuses to give out the details of the battle.

Austrian Ships Hasten to Otranto
Rome, Aug. 10.—Thirteen Austrian battleships and cruisers and sixteen torpedo boat destroyers are rushing at forced draught straight for Otranto.

It is reported that these vessels have been called to the aid of the German cruisers Goeben and Breslau, menaced by British warships.

To Incubate Cholera Victims.
Vienna, Aug. 10.—The government's cholera quarantine prevents wounded soldiers from coming to the capital.

A trainload of physicians and nurses have departed for the front. All soldiers who have been the victims of cholera will likely be incinerated.

Bavarians Protest Against War.
Brussels, Aug. 10.—The Vingtieme Sociale publishes the statement that the Bavarian government has wired the kaiser, protesting against Germany going to war.

The message states that Austria's war is with Serbia and there was no reason for Germany being involved in the conflict.

Battle Reported in Adriatic.
London, Aug. 10.—A Milan dispatch to the Daily Chronicle says that a steamship, which has arrived at Trieste, reports an engagement in the Adriatic sea. One hundred wounded, according to the report have been conveyed to Pola, the great naval port of Austria.

Pick of the British Army.
Paris, Aug. 10.—It was officially announced Saturday afternoon that 20,000 English troops already had landed at Ostend, Calais and Dunkirk.

They are proceeding toward Namur, to the west of Liege, on the main railroad line, to assist the Belgians.

The first British expeditionary force comprised some of the crack regiments of the British army. The troops were immediately landed under.

45,000 Men Lost by French and Germans

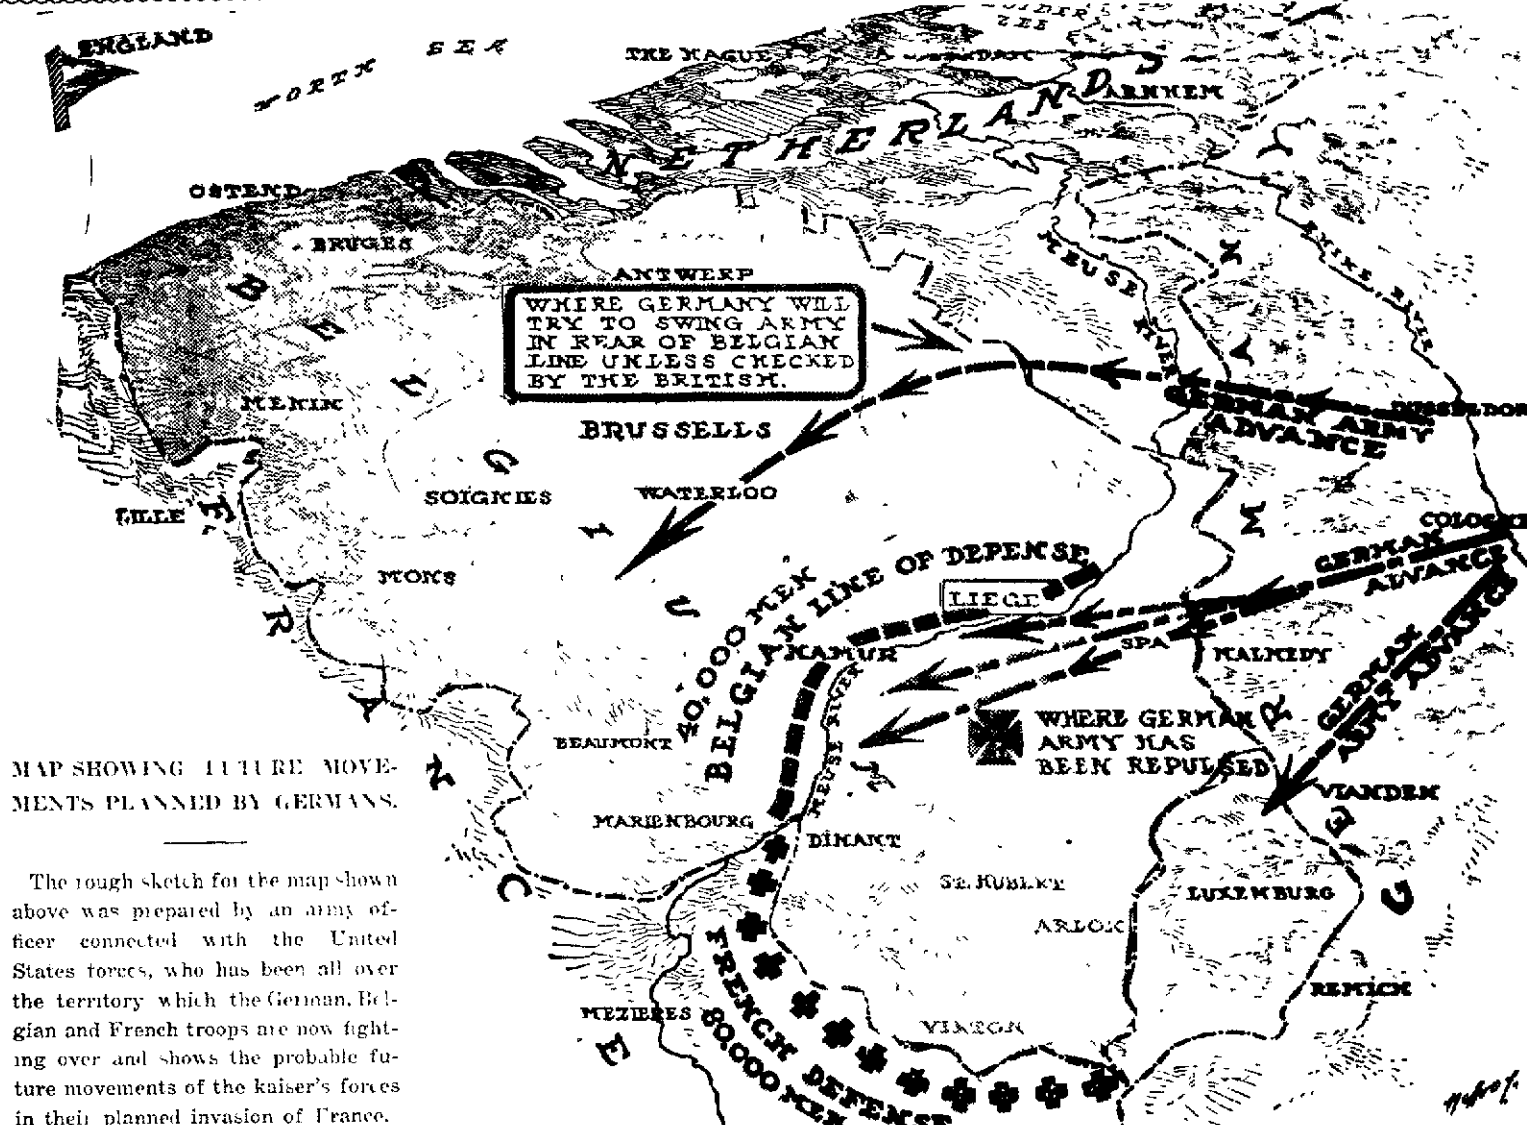

Paris, Aug. 10.—Unofficial dispatches reached Paris yesterday saying that the French army which is invading Alsace and which broke through the German defenses at Altkirch Saturday morning and occupied the heavily fortified town of Muehlhausen yesterday afternoon, has pushed on to Colmar, 22 miles beyond Muehlhausen.

From the details received here, the Germans apparently made their stand at Altkirch, where they had thrown up entrenchments, rather than at Muehlhausen, the capture of which is reported to have taken only about an hour after the French column arrived before the earthworks.

The French lost 15,000 men and the Germans 30,000, according to the reports which have come from the front in the fighting which preceded the capture of Altkirch, the chief losses being at the former town.

The war ministry today announced that only 100 French were killed and wounded at Muehlhausen. The troops are still being held there.

MAP SHOWING FUTURE MOVEMENTS PLANNED BY GERMANS.

The rough sketch for the map shown above was prepared by an army officer connected with the United States forces, who has been all over the territory which the German, Belgian and French troops are now fighting over and shows the probable future movements of the kaiser's forces in their planned invasion of France.

Germans Put Whole Village to the Sword Because Three Gardeners Fired on a Detachment of the Kaiser's Troops Encamped at a Farmhouse—Serbia Declares War on Germany to Get Rid of That Country's Minister

(By International News Service.)
Amsterdam, Aug. 10, 3.30 P. M.—The Germans have driven the Belgians from the outer Liege forts.

Few Details Known.
London, Aug. 10.—Germany insisted yesterday that Liege had fallen, while Belgium announced that it still resisted the invaders.

From the conflicting reports, it seems probable that German troops have entered the city and driven out the Belgian infantry, but have been unable to reduce the forts. Between 3000 and 4000 Belgian prisoners are being sent back to Germany.

It is regarded as probable that the Germans have left enough soldiers to invest the fortifications and are marching to the south along the Meuse.

Big Battle May Occur Very Soon

London, Aug. 10.—A dispatch to the Times from Berne, Switzerland, says 40,000 Austrian troops have concentrated near Basel, and that German and French troops also are near the Swiss frontier so that a big battle may occur at any moment.

The Daily Mail's home correspondent adds that, according to dispatches from Basel, Switzerland, the Germans have evacuated Hunkel Ludwig, in Alsace, four miles northwest of Basel, and that a battle is imminent on the Franco-Swiss frontier.

Fear for Americans in the Mediterranean

(By International News Service.)
Washington, Aug. 10.—The battleship Maine has been ordered to remain at Gibraltar.

This order followed a conference between Secretary Bryan and Secretary Daniels. The administration is beginning to fear that Americans and their property are menaced in the Mediterranean.

Secretary Daniels, in denying the Tokio cable that an American fleet is expected in Asia, said:

FORESTRY EXPERT TELLS HOW GOVERNMENT POLICY FOR SMALL WOODLAND OWN-ERS WAS PLANNED BY PENNSYLVANIAN.

ALWAYS GAVE HELP FREE

From Beginning of Career Pinchot Was Always Active in Caring for Interests of Owners of Wood Patches—His Work Highly Succes-ful in Helping to Solve Rural Timber Problems.

GIFFORD PINCHOT'S WORK FOR PRIVATE FORESTRY.

BY OVERTON W. PRICE.
Associate Forester, United States Forestry Service for Twelve Years—For
Two Years Engaged by the Canadian Government to Put the Control of the Crown Forests on a Business Basis.

Before Gifford Pinchot became forester to the United States Department
of Agriculture, he had already rendered pioneer service in both public
and private forestry. As the only
forester on the committee appointed
by the National Academy of Sciences
in 1896 to report to Hoke Smith, then Secretary of the U. S. Department of the Interior, a plan for forest policy
for the United States, he laid the
foundations for the National Forest
policy which he was afterwards to administer as head of the U. S. Forest Service, with such brilliant success.

The report of the committee, while
alive to the need for the protection
of the forests owned by the National Government, ignored very largely the
need to get them more fully used
and enjoyed by the western people.
Pinchot, with characteristic willingness to face any issue which involves
which laid strong emphasis upon the

he left in 1900 to become director of
the Yale Forest School. This school
was founded by a donation of $150,000
and later supported by further contributions, including the building and
equipment for a summer school of
Pennsylvania, by Gifford Pinchot, his
mother, his father, James W. Pinchot
and his brother, Amos Pinchot. Pin-
chot's wish has always been that his
home state should lead in forest edu-
a summer school of forestry should be maintained at Milford, Pennsylvania, was an express condition of the
School.

Helped Small Forest Owners.
But while Pinchot took prompt advantage, as in the case of Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr. Whitney, of opportunities offered by farsighted men of
large means for the establishment of
great object lessons in forestry, ever
as a consulting forester he put the
stronger emphasis upon his work in
co-operation with smaller forest owners, realizing that upon them chiefly depends the future of American forests.

From the beginning of his professional career he gave a very large
share of his active interest to wood-
lot forestry, not only because the
farmer and the farm have always
been near to his heart, but also because his forest work soon led to a
keen appreciation of the need for
better methods, in the interest of the
farmers and of the Nation, of caring
for the patches of woodland which are
usually an adjunct to the farm.

for his activities in this and other
phases of forestry, for in 1898 he was
invited by President McKinley and
the Secretary of Agriculture, then
Forest Service of the Federal Government. The small force of the Division contained several experienced and able men; but its general
policy was such that it was contributing very little towards improving
methods of fire protection and of logging within that one-fourth of the United States which is still under
forest cover.

Gave Farmers Expert Advice.
But Pinchot, fresh from the lumber
woods, with a vision which saw
straight to the grave public necessity
for forest conservation, and with that
business-like and practical method of
approach upon forest problems which
had been the chief factor in his success with Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr.
Whitney, knew just what he wanted
to do as United States Forester. Very
soon after he assumed office the Division of Forestry made the expert
knowledge of its members directly
available to private forest owners,
great and small, by offering to prepare co-operative plans for the conservative management of their forest
holdings. This offer, which was thoroughly practical and definite in its
terms, entailed the execution of a
contract providing that the Government should render expert assistance
and advice, and that the timber land
owner should pay a fair part of the cost of the work.

But it is significant of Pinchot's
dominant interest on behalf of the
small man, the guiding principle of
wood-lot owner, who is usually a
small farmer, received the co-operation
of the Government without cost to
him. That was also thoroughly
fair, since wood-lot forestry involves
merely practical advice on the ground,
which usually can be given by an ex-

He Helped Stop Wastes.
As the field of activity of the Division of Forestry widened under the
stimulus of opportunity and leadership, new lines of work contributing
directly to decreasing the drain on
private forests in America was inaugurated. "Forests are destroyed not
only by fires and bad logging," said Pinchot, "but the timber destroyed
by wasteful use is also worth saving." The result of that conviction
on his part is today a great forests
products laboratory at Madison, Wisconsin, the most advanced of its kind
in the world. There experts and fore-
est engineers are productively engaged in testing the strength of native timbers, in experimenting with
timber preservatives for lengthening
the life of timber in use, and in a
vast range of investigations looking
to the profitable manufacture of by-
products from wood and the prevention of waste.

Nor did Pinchot stop his efforts to improve methods of private forestry
with work in the woods or in forest
products investigations. He was the first man to advocate with really important results forest tax laws which
of forests rather than promote their
destruction by an excessive tax burden on the timber crop. The recent forest tax laws enacted in Pennsylvania are among the achievements of his long campaign for general reform
in forest taxation, and had also his
strong personal co-operation in the
steps incident to their passage.

Has Helped Lumbermen.
It is Pinchot again who leads in a
much more recent movement now rapidly taking shape, for Federal legislation fair to the lumberman and fair
to the forests, which will insure the
general practice of forestry on private forest lands in the United States. For
as he has pointed out, this question
of private forestry is an intensely
practical one. This Nation faces
somewhere within fifty years unavoidable timber scarcity. It is using
three times as much timber each year
as all our forests produce by yearly
growth. If the present destructive
methods of logging on private lands
continue the result will be not mere

timber scarcity, but timber famine.
Pinchot's conviction is that the next
great step ahead in forestry will be
some form of Federal requirement
for the practice of forestry by private
owners generally in the United States,
under methods which will insure to
them an adequate return for their enterprise and their investment, and
which will insure to the American
people a constant supply of wood
from private forests conserved by
wise use.

To make such requirements state
by state would make inequalities of
competition, but to make them nation-

Pinchot Stands With Public.
So Pinchot is found again on the
side of the public, as a new stage of
the long fight begins for getting practical forestry into general effect on private forest lands. With him stand
not only other foresters, but a fast
increasing group of farsighted and
successful lumbermen themselves; men
who like John B. White, born in Pennsylvania, but now residing in Kansas City, see that the public interest and the private interest in the forest are elsewhere is fundamentally harmonious; and that what stands between most lumbermen and the practice of forestry is not danger of loss
through forestry, but failure to realize
that true and constant profits from
the forest are to be had only through

Men like Pinchot and John B. White
see that by making easy money quick
and destroying the forest by wasteful
logging methods and by indifference
to forest fires, the lumber industry is rapidly consuming itself; and that
cutting more and more lumber each
year to supply the extravagant demands of the United States, which
has the largest per capita lumber consumption in the world, does not necessarily mean that lumbermen are making more money each year, but often
the reverse.

Lumbermen like John B. White
want regulation of the lumber industry by the Nation, not only because
they are patriotic, but also because
they are wise men. And Gifford Pin-
chot is helping the American people
and the fair minded lumbermen to get it.

"How long will it take to get it?"
he was recently asked.
"Maybe ten years; possibly more or less," he replied. "But it will come.
The important thing is not only that
it should come as soon as possible,
but that it should be fair—fair to the people and the forests, and fair to the
lumbermen."

HEALTH HINT FOR TODAY.

Uneven Shoulders.
Uneven shoulders make many
a girl fear to wear a halterneck
dress or low necked gown, because it makes this defect publicly conspicuous. For such corrective exercises are needed to remedy the trouble. Here is a hint that will prove valuable if
persisted in daily: Stand erect
shoulder raised above the head.
Grasp a heavy baton in the other hand and let this arm hang
at the side. Now push up vigorously with the upraised arm
and at the same time press down
with the hanging arm, keeping
the body and hips still and doing
shoulder muscles.

Getting Even.
"You are half an hour late this morning," said a schoolmaster to a scholar.
"Yes, sir," replied the boy, who had
been "kept in" the day before. "It was
late yesterday when I got home!"—

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the
day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements.
Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain
in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats
may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news.
Read them regularly and al-

Items of Interest, Gathered Here and There, For The Boys Who Man The Trains

IMPORTANT RULING BY THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

The public service commission has
rendered an opinion in a complaint
about rates for shipping coal that
has interested people connected with
scores of operations in Western Pennsylvania and held that it is "unlawful and inequitable" for the rate for
shipment of coal in cars belonging to
coal company, coal operator or coal
producer to be lower than that
charged for the shipment of coal
in a car belonging to a railroad.
The case gets back pretty close to
the old private car complaint of
some years ago and was rendered in
the case brought against the Pennsylvania for its rate from Biddle, Irwin, Penn., and Hahntown to Jeannette and other points by the American Window Glass Company,
Pennsylvania Rubber Company, West
moreland Specialty Company, Mc-
Kee Glass Company and Pittsburgh
Lamp, Brass and Glass Company.
The rates of the company are reviewed and it is held that most of
those effective on June 1 are not
given, for some of the rates is in

ment.
The commission decided that the rate to Grapeville and Biddle should not be higher than the rate to Jeannette and orders a reduction from 25 cents to 20 cents a ton; and
that the rate of 30 cents a ton from Hahntown to Jeannette be reduced to 25 cents a ton. The rates of 15 cents
a ton from Penn to Jeannette and Grapeville and 20 cents a ton from Biddle to Jeannette are held to be reasonable.

No Cresson Improvements.
That the Pennsy will not erect a new passenger station this year at Cresson, is the announcement made by officials on the Pittsburgh division.
says an exchange. Residents of the mountain town and patrons of the Keystone road have been anxiously anticipating the building of a new depot.

Those who believed that the new structure would be erected this year have been sorely disappointed and are now looking forward to 1915
when, it is thought, the much-desired building will be placed there.

No Free Transportation.
The Pennsylvania railroad, begin-

ing September 1, will discontinue the
privilege heretofore extended to Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington commuters of free transportation
of market produce. Hereafter produce will be carried at the nominal
charges made for the transportation
of articles designed solely for home
or personal use.

During the past, when the suburban sections of the large cities were
sparsely settled, the free carrying of
market produce was permitted for
commuters, but now the management
feels that there is no longer any occasion to render free a service performed by the railroad at considerable expense, especially as no such
privilege has been accorded any other
localities on the company's lines.

gest crowd the road has handled
this summer. A large number went

BY FRANG G. MENKE.
(By International News Service.)

New York, Aug. 10.—It's about time that Ban Johnson, John Tener and Jimmy Gilmore got together in some quiet corner and decide that their own interests would be served best by ending the baseball warfare.

The vast majority of fans are tired of the baseball war. They want peace. Give it to them and they'll soon be trekking back to the parks. They deserted the parks this year not so much because they have lost their love for the national game but in silent protest against the constant mud-slinging that the baseball conflict has caused.

The fans aren't vitally interested in law suits. They aren't interested in those. They don't care much about the merits of the ten day clause or the contract itself so long as they are sure of seeing baseball—of seeing the first class variety that sends the blood coursing a bit faster through the veins, that sends a thrill of delight chasing through the framework.

The fans aren't vitally interested much either in whether Ban Johnson thinks Jimmy Gilmore ought to be sent to Siberia for sixteen million years, or whether Gilmore thinks Garry Herrman isn't half as nice a fellow as he is himself. Such things might have been a bit diverting for a time, but that time has passed. They bore and they disgust.

Organized baseball has waged a bit of fight against the Feds. And ever the most bitter enemies of the Federal cannot deny the fact that "out-laws" have put up a game fight. They horned into a situation where even angels may have feared to tread. They found the enemy waiting with drawn clubs and loaded machine guns. But they waded right in.

It's nearly four months since the Feds opened their season. It was predicted they wouldn't last until May 1st. Then the prediction was shifted toward June 1. The next date for the blow-up was July 1, then July 15, then August 1. But there hasn't been any detonation.

The Feds have about $5,000,000 at stake and they aren't going to quit the battle, especially since they won out in the important Johnson and Chase law suits. Most of the magnates in the new league are plentifully supplied with money. They went into the new league proposition with their eyes open. They knew they wouldn't make much progress the first year, but they gambled on the succeeding years. It looks like a pretty good gamble at that.

There are some magnates within the confines of organized baseball who are wise men. In the last two months they have concluded that peace is a much cheaper proposition than warfare. And they are for peace and are trying to swing into line the magnates who are still keen for warfare.

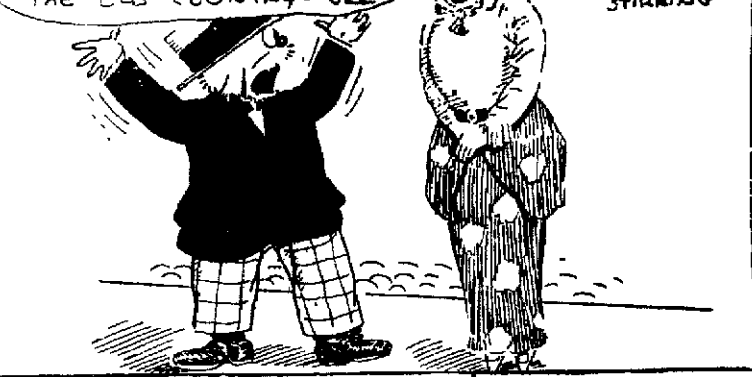

Most of the organized clubs will lose money this year. And even if the attendance does chirp up next year they are sure to suffer more losses if warfare continues, as the Feds are planning a new raid on the big stars. To keep these men the Organized Moguls will have to bid high. That means cluttering up the payroll with salaries so huge that they will overbalance the receipts.

Peace now before the players can get many more chances at playing both ends against the middle for big salaries will save the magnates many thousands of dollars. Or shall it be continuation of war that so far has proven futile and that gives little hope of being ultimately successful?

The Polo Champions.

The English polo team, of which the Duke of Mike, and the Earl of Jake are members, challenges Foxy Bean, manager of the American polo team, to a championship game to be played in America.

The Britishers after being properly decorated with the order of the Boston Garter by the Prince of Whales, leaves England's shore on the backs of their ponies, and swim across the Atlantic ocean. They arrive safely in America, and are greeted in a right royal fashion by the opposing team.

The great match is pulled off. Through the superior playing of the Duke of Mike and the Earl of Jake, the Britishers win the game. But the Americans resent what surely seems unfair methods displayed by their opponents and a "free-for-all" results. The Britishers, however, are saved by a number of American heiresses, who, witnessing the distress of the blue-bloods, rush to their rescue.

Shown this evening at the opera house.

Joe Birmingham thinks he has pulled a prize in Jay Kirke, the first baseman who was with the Braves last year.

President James E. Gaffney of the Boston Braves is out with a strong denial that he has any thought of selling his club.

SHECKARD IS MAKING GOOD

Jim's Great Knowledge of Baseball is Causing Cleveland Team to Be Feared Around Circuit.

Measured by the standards of hard work, baseball brains and the attitude his players have toward him, Jim Sheckard, Spider manager, is one of the season's most successful new baseball leaders, despite the position of his club.

From the moment Sheckard steps on to the field until the last man is out, he's hard at work. Not a man goes to bat until Manager Jim has talked over with him the probable way he is to hit.

During practice Sheckard is always lifting 'em out to the fielders, fielding or coaching some of the youngsters. He has shown every man on the Cleveland team some new angle of the game. In exercising his functions as manager he's not at all bossy or arbitrary.

There isn't a man in the entire Spider crew who doesn't like Sheckard. It's the consideration he has shown every one of his men that has made him so well liked. Never grouchy, peeved or out of sorts, Sheckard makes himself liked by always having a pleasant word for anyone who approaches him.

Good evening! Don't get excited; there will be no naval battles fought on the Susquehanna river.

The peace hall at the The Hague has been closed indefinitely.

Prices of foodstuffs are certain to go up, and even the price of wind pudding may rise.

The town of Limburger has been invaded by the enemy. Sad news for lovers of that delectable compound.

The female who is qualified to vote is the female who does not glance into plate glass windows to see if she looks all right.

Judging from the clothes they don't wear, no one would suspect that some of the girls of this town have attended finishing schools.

Somebody complain that the High school students are not fitted to take up the work of their lives. Well, we know several graduates of the High school who can roll a cigarette with one hand.

Clearfield county citizens would have a higher regard for the state fisheries department if the latter were to make it possible for game fish to live in the waters of the West Branch of the Susquehanna river.

Somehow or other, the names of Clearfielders generally sift to the bottom of the wheel when jurors are to be drawn. For the September term of court only about one Clearfield citizen in a thousand will sit on jury.

Curwensville had no difficulty in entertaining the Red Men last week, members of the local aerie being earnest in their praise of the hospitality of the citizens of the up-river town. The Red Men's picnic was a most enjoyable affair and the event passed off without a single unpleasant feature to mar the pleasure of the day.

HAS LIEGE FALLEN!
Without wishing to be one of those whom the emperor of Germany calls the "enemies of Germany," the average American citizen cannot but feel sympathy for the gallant band of forty thousand Belgians who for almost a week held at bay several hundred thousand of the kaiser's most experienced troops at Liege. The defense of that famous city by the handful of Belgians will go down in history as one of the most bravely and ably contested battles in which two nations have been pitted against each other.

It is announced from Berlin that Liege has fallen. If this be true the persistence of the Germans has won, but it is a victory which should bring tears of sorrow, rather than shouts of joy. At last twenty-five thousand German soldiers died in front of Liege. This means that at least ten thousand German women are widows and possibly forty thousand German children are fatherless. And these German soldiers were sacrificed—for what? That the war lord might gain one step in his long-contemplated wish to avenge himself upon his enemies.

The fall of Liege, if it has fallen, does not end the war in Belgium. The Germans must take other strongly entrenched positions, and when they reach other fortifications they will undoubtedly find that French and English troops have joined the Belgians and are ready to contest every step the kaiser's troops may take in their proposed march on France. The news from the various fields of action in the European war this week is likely to be far more interesting than that of last week, despite the strict censorship over what is transpiring that is maintained at the several capitals.

It is gratifying to see that a number of Clearfield dealers have discovered that there is a way by which vegetables, fruits and other goods displayed in front of their stores may be protected against possible contamination from flies, dogs and other obnoxious things which attack perishable articles left standing in front of stores. The consumer of vegetables is more likely to deal with the merchant who keeps his goods clean and uncontaminated than from the merchant who carelessly displays his goods where they may be covered with flies and filth.

The slight expense necessary to the procuring of coverings for fruits placed on display is more than made up in the satisfaction that will come to the merchant in the knowledge that he has protected his goods. Citizens who deal at the local stores can do much toward advancing the cause of cleanliness by refusing to deal at the store where no effort is made to keep unwholesome and disease-breeding germs from their goods. Every store keeper should be only too willing to prove that he desires to keep his goods pure and free from filth of all kinds.

Giving Proper Credit.

Two Philadelphians were talking of the fortune of a third denizen of that city when one said:

His first lucky strike was in eggs. He bought 10,000 dozens at a low figure, put them in cold storage, and sold them at a profit of more than 30 per cent. That was the corner-stone of his great fortune.

It was a summer evening;
Old Kaspar's work was done,
And he before his cottage door
Was sitting in the sun;
And by him sported on the green
His little grandchild Wilhelmine.

She saw her brother Peterkin
Roll something large and round,
Which he beside the rivulet
In his playing there had found;
He came to ask what he had found,
That was so large and smooth and round.

Old Kaspar took it from the boy,
Who stood expectant by;
And then the old man shook his head,
And with a natural sigh,
"Tis some poor fellow's skull," said he
Who fell in the great victory."

"I find them in the garden,
For there's many hereabout;
And often when I go to plow,
The plowshare turns them out;
For many thousand men," said he,
"We're slain in the great victory."

"Now tell us what 'twas all about,"
Young Peterkin he cries;
And little Wilhelmine looks up
With wonder-waiting eyes;
Now tell us all about the war,
And what they fought each other for."

"It was the English," Kaspar cried,
"Who put the French to rout;
But what they fought each other for,
I could not well make out;
But everybody said," quoth he,
"That 'twas a famous victory."

"My father lived at Blenheim then,
Yon little stream hard by;
They burnt his dwelling to the ground
And he was forced to fly,
So with his wife and child he fled,
Nor had he where to rest his head."

"With fire and sword the country round
Was wasted far and wide,
And many a childing mother then,
And new-born baby, died,
But things like that, you know, must be
At every famous victory."

"They say it was a shocking sight
After the field was won;
For many thousand bodies there
Lay rotting in the sun;
But things like that, you know, must be,
After a famous victory"

Great praise the Duke of Malbora' won
And our good Prince Eugene,
"Why, 'twas a very wicked thing!"
Said little Wilhelmine.

"Nay, nay, my little girl," quoth he;
"It was a famous victory."
"And everybody praised the Duke,
Who this great fight did win."

Quoth little Peterkin.
"Why, that I cannot tell," said he;

AN ORDINANCE.

Authorizing the construction of a sanitary sewer on Hannah and Olive Streets, in the Third Ward of the Borough of Clearfield, Pennsylvania, to extend from a point near the Lawrence Township line at the Western end of Hannah Street to the main sewer on Turnpike Avenue, and providing that the cost thereof be assessed back to the owners of the properties abutting on said streets.

Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Borough of Clearfield in Council regularly assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by authority of the same:

Section 1. That a public sanitary sewer be laid out, constructed and built on Hannah and Olive Streets in the Third Ward of the Borough of Clearfield, Pennsylvania, to extend from a point near the Lawrence Township line at the Western end of Hannah Street East along said street to Olive Street, thence along Olive Street, North to Hannah Street and thence along Hannah Street to the main sewer on Turnpike Avenue; said sewer to be constructed of terra cotta pipe and to be not less than eight inches in diameter; and when completed the cost thereof shall be assessed back to the owners of the real estate abutting on said streets, which assessment if not promptly paid shall be collected from said abutting property owners as provided by law.

Section 2. The Utilities Committee of the Town Council is hereby authorized to lay out, build and construct said sewer under the direction and supervision of the Borough Engineer, and when said sewer is constructed it shall become one of the public sewers of said borough, and shall be subject to all the rules and regulations for the control of the sewerage system of the Borough of Clearfield.

Ordained and enacted this fifth day of August, A. D. 1914.

BIGLER TOWNSHIP WILL GET NEW STATE HIGHWAY

The state highway department will have some highway work done, beginning this coming fall.

There are eight applications, aggregating twelve and three fifths miles.

The first one of the applications upon which bids will be received is for 5,200 feet of highway in Bigler township, Clearfield county, from a point near the road leading to Pine run, easterly through the village of Madaga to the line between the Cornley-McCamley properties. This pavement, which is to be of brick blocks, of the standard width of 16 feet, is to be completed by the first of next June.

Sara Helsey, the little daughter of Ralph Helsey, while walking with her uncle, Charles Hall, and his family Sunday evening near Hyde City became bewildered as an automobile from Punxsutawney came near them and was run over by the car. The child was run over by three wheels before the car could be stopped. Both bones in the right leg and one arm were broken and a hand crushed and three stitches were used to sew up a cut in her face. The doctor cannot yet assure the family that there are not internal injuries.

The accident happened just above Hyde City, near the home of Mrs. George Hall, where the child with her mother and father are living. She is being taken care of at the Hall home.

BALLOON ASCENSION TO BE SEEN ON LABOR DAY

Arrangements for the balloon ascension have been completed by the Boosters club committee, and the event will no doubt attract many visitors.

Headquarters for the registering of babies for the baby show are now open. Mothers should get busy. Headquarters in the Croyle building, room 2.

A meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held Tuesday evening August 11 at 7 P. M. at the home of Mrs. Bouton, on Locust street. All members are requested to be present, as the election of a delegate to attend the convention at DuBois will take place, and also the election of the local officers for the year.

CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN AT ONCE, HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Breathe Freely! Clears Stuffed-up Inflamed Nose and Head and Stops Catarrhal Discharges. Cures Dull Headache.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now. Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane, which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

Mr. Merchant:

Are you one of the wide awake "get there" class of merchants who knows a good thing when he sees it? Are you one of the lucky ones who is going to get in on the ground floor of the business of Clearfield? If you are not then it is up to you to get on the band wagon before the parade of good business starts, and the only way to let the people know that you are on earth and doing business is to

Advertise In The Progress

And just to prove to you that The Progress produces results for you, let us tell you what one of Clearfield's biggest merchants said of The Progress. His statement was that his advertising in The Progress had eliminated the use of hand bills entirely, and that he had seen direct returns from his advertising in this newspaper and in a most gratifying form.

The Progress

Goes into nearly every home in Clearfield and the surrounding territory. That is why this merchant gets the results that he can see. Let us prove it to you, or better yet, Make Us Prove It.

The Adventures of Kathlyn

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Illustrated by Pictures from the Moving Picture Production of the Selig Polyscope Co.

(Copyright by Harold MacGrath)

He confessed everything, where the king was, where you were. They are again hunting through the city for you. For the present you must hide with me."

"The white woman must die," said Umballa, in a voice like one being strangled.

To this the priests agreed without hesitation. This white woman whom the people were calling a goddess was a deadly menace to that scepter of theirs, superstition.

"What has gone is a pact?"

"A pact, Durga Ram," said the chief priest. With Ramabal spreading Christianity, the abhorred creed which gave people liberty of person and thought, the future of his own religion stood in imminent danger. "A pact," he reflected. "To you, Durga Ram, the throne; to us half the treasury and all the ancient rites of our creed restored."

"I have said it."

Umballa followed the dancing girl into the square before the temple. He turned and smiled ironically. The bald fools!

"Lead on, thou flower of the jasmine!" lightly.

And the two of them disappeared into the night.

But the priests smiled, too, for Durga Ram should always be more in their power than they in his.

There was tremendous excitement in the city the next morning. It seemed that the city would never be permitted to resume its old careless indolence. Swift as the wind the news flew that the old king was alive, that he had been held prisoner all these months by Durga Ram and the now deposed Council of Three. No more the old rut of dullness. Never had they known such fetes. Since the arrival of the white goddess not a day had passed without some thrilling excitement, which had cost them nothing but shouts.

So they deserted the bazaars and markets that morning to witness the most surprising spectacle of all; the king who was dead was not dead, but alive!

So, in the throne room, later, he gave the power to Ramabal to act in his stead till he had fully recovered from his terrible hardships. More than this, he declared that Pundita, the wife of Ramabal, should ultimately rule! For of a truth the principality was lawfully hers. He would make his will at once, but in order that this should be legal he would have to destroy the previous will he had given to Colonel Hare, his friend.

"Forgive me, my friend," he said. "I acted unwisely in your case. But I was angry with my people for their cowardice."

"Your majesty," replied the colonel, "the fault lay primarily with me. I should not have accepted it or returned. I will tell you the truth. It was the filigree basket of gold and precious stones that brought me back."

"So? And all for nothing, since the hiding place I gave you is not the true one. But of that, more anon. I want this wretch Durga Ram spread out on an ant hill . . ."

And then, without apparent reason, he began to call for Lakshmi, the beautiful Lakshmi, the wife of his youth. He ordered preparations for an elephant fight; rambled, talked as though he were but twenty; his eyes dim, his lips loose and pendulous. And in this condition he might live ten or twenty years. Ramabal was sore at heart.

They had to wait two days till his mind cleared again. His first question upon his return to his mental balance was directed to Kathlyn. Where was the document he had given to his friend Hare? Kathlyn explained that Umballa had taken it from her.

"But, your majesty," exclaimed the colonel rather impatiently, "what difference does it make? Your return has nullified that document."

"Not in case of my death. And in Allah's elder document is always the legal document, unless it is legally destroyed. It is not well to antagonize the priests, who hold us firmly to this law. I might make a will in favor of Pundita, but it would not legally hold in justice if all previous wills were not legally destroyed. You must find this document."

"Did you ever hear of a law to equal that?" asked Bruce of the colonel.

"No, my boy, I never did. It would mean a good deal of red tape for a man who changed his mind frequently. He could not fool his relations; they would know. The laws of the dark peoples have always amazed me, because if you dig deep enough into them you are likely to find common sense at the bottom. We must search Umballa's house thoroughly. I wish to see Ramabal and Pundita in the shadow of their rights. Can't destroy a document off-hand and make a new one without legally destroying the first. Well, let us be getting back to the bungalow. We'll talk it over there."

systematically being prepared for the homeward journey. The laughter and chatter of the two girls was music to their father's ears. And sometimes he intercepted secret glances between Bruce and Kathlyn. Youth, youth; youth and love! Well, so it was. He himself had been a youth, had loved and been loved. But he grew very lonely at the thought of Kathlyn eventually going into another home; and some young chap would soon come and claim Winnie, and he would have no one but Ahmed. If only he had had a boy, to bring his bride to his father's roof!

Pictures were taken down from the walls, the various wild animal heads, and were packed away in strong boxes. And Ahmed went thither and you, a hundred cares upon his shoulders. He was busy because then he had no time to mourn Lal Singh.

Bruce's camp was, of course, in utter ruin. Not even the cooking utensils remained; and of his men there was left but Ali, whose leg still caused him to limp a little. So Bruce was commanded by no less person than Kathlyn to be her father's guest till they departed for America. Daily Winnie rode Rajah. He was such a funny old pachyderm, a kind of clown among his brethren, but as gentle as a kitten. Running away had not paid. He was like the country boy who had gone to the big city; he never more could be satisfied with the farm.

The baboon hung about the colonel's heels as a dog might have done; while Kathlyn had found a tiger cub for a plaything. So for awhile peace reigned at the camp.

They found the much-sought document in the secret chamber in Umballa's house (just as he intended they should); and the king had it legally destroyed and wrote a new will, wherein Pundita should have back that which the king's ancestors had taken from hers—a throne.

After that there was nothing for Colonel Hare to do but proceed to ship his animals to the railroad, thence to the ports where he could dispose of them. Never should he enter this part of India again. Life was too short.

High and low they hunted Umballa, but without success. He was hidden well. They were, however, assured that he lingered in the city and was sinisterly alive.

Day after day the king grew stronger mentally and physically. Many of the reforms suggested by Ramabal were put into force. Quiet at length really settled down upon the city. They began to believe that Umballa had fled the city, and vigilance correspondingly relaxed.

The king had a private chamber, the window of which overlooked the garden of brides. There, with his sherbets and water pipe he resumed his old habit of inditing verse in pure Persian, for he was a scholar. He never entered the zenana or harem; but occasionally he sent for some of the women to play and dance before him. And the woman who loved Umballa was among these. One day she asked to take a journey into the bazaars to visit her sister. Ordinarily such a request would have been denied. But the king no longer cared what the women did, and the chief eunuch slept afternoons and nights, being only partly alive in the mornings.

An hour later a palanquin was lowered directly beneath the king's window. To his eye it looked exactly like the one which had departed. He went on writing, absorbed. Had he looked closely, had he been the least suspicious . . .

This palanquin was the gift of Durga Ram, so-called Umballa. It had been built especially for this long-awaited occasion. It was nothing more nor less than a sunning cage in which a tiger was huddled, in a vile temper. The palanquin bearers, friends of the dancing girl, had overpowered the royal bearers and donned their costumes. At this moment one of the bearers (Umballa himself, trusting no one!) crawled stealthily under the palanquin and touched the spring which liberated the tiger and opened the blind. The furious beast sprang to the window. The king was too astonished to move, to appreciate his danger. From yon harmless palanquin this striped fury!

Ramabal and his officers were just entering the corridor which led to the chamber when the tragedy occurred. They heard the noise, the king's cries. When they reached the door silence greeted them.

The room was wrecked. There was evidence of a short but terrific struggle. The king lay dead upon the floor, the side of his head crushed in. His turban and garments were in tatters. But he had died like a king; for in the corner by the window lay the striped one, a jeweled dagger in his throat.

Ramabal was first to discover the deserted palanquin, and proceeded to investigate. It did not take him more than a minute to understand what had happened. It was not an accident; it was cold-blooded murder, and back of it stood the infernal ingenuity of one man.

Death of the Real King of Allaha.

Thus fate took Allaha by the hair again and shook her out of the pastoral quiet. What would happen now? This!

On the morning after the tragic death of the old king, those who went early to worship, to propitiate the gods to deal kindly with them during the day, were astounded to find the doors and gates of all the temples closed! Nor was any priest visible in his usual haunts. The people were stunned. For there could be but one interpretation to this act on the part of the gurus: the gods had denied the people. Why? Wherefore? Twenty-four hours passed without their learning the cause; the priests desired to fill them with terror before they struck.

Then came the distribution of pamphlets wherein it was decreed that the populace, the soldiery, all Allaha, in fact, must bow to the will of the gods or go heretofore accursed. The gods demanded the reinstatement as regent Durga Ram; the deposing of Ramabal, the infidel; the fealty of the troops to Durga Ram; 24 hours were given the people to make their choice.

Before the doors of all the temples the people gathered, wailing and pouring dust upon their heads, from Brahmin to pariah, from high caste matrons to light dancing girls. And when the troops, company by company, began to kneel at the outer rim of these gatherings, Ramabal dispatched a note to Colonel Hare, warning him to fly at once. But the messenger tore up the note and flew to his favorite temple. Superstition thus won what honor, truth and generosity could not hold.

All this happened so quickly that not even a rumor of it reached the colonel's bungalow till it was too late. They were to have left on the morrow. The king dead, only a few minor technicalities stood in the way of Ramabal and Pundita.

Bruce and Kathlyn were fencing one with the other, after the manner of lovers, when Winnie, her eyes wide with fright, burst in upon them with the news that Umballa, at the head of many soldiers, was approaching. The lovers rushed to the front of the bungalow in time to witness the colonel trying to prevent the intrusion of a priest.

"Patience, sahib!" warned the priest.

The colonel, upon seeing Umballa, made an attempt to draw his revolver, but the soldiers prevented him from carrying into execution his wild impulse.

The priest explained what had happened. The Colonel Sahib, his friend Bruce Sahib and his youngest daughter would be permitted to depart in peace; but Kathlyn Memsahib must wed Durga Ram.

When the dazed colonel produced the document which had been legally canceled, Umballa laughed and declared that he himself had forged that particular document, that the true, which he held, was not legally destroyed.

Burning with the thought of revenge, of reprisal, how could Durga Ram know that he thus dug his own pit? Had he let them go he would have eventually been crowned, as surely as now his path led straight to the treadmill.

Ahmed alone escaped, because Umballa had in his triumph forgotten him!

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Woman Scorned.

There is an old saying in Rajput that woman and the four winds were born at the same time, of the same mother: blew hot, blew cold, balmily or tempestuously, from all points at once. Perhaps. In the zenana of the royal palace

there was a woman, tall, lithe, with a skin of ivory and roses and eyes as brown as the husk of a water chestnut. On her bare ankles were gem-encrusted anklets, on her arms bracelets of hammered gold, round her neck a rope of pearls and emeralds and rubies and sapphires. And still she was not happy.

From time to time her fingers strained at the roots of her glossy black hair and the whites of her great eyes glistened. She bit her lips to keep back the sobs crowding in her throat. She pressed her hands together so tightly that the little knuckles cracked.

"Al, al!" she wailed softly. She paced the confines of her chamber with slow step, with fast step; or leaned against the wall, her face hidden in her arms; or pressed her hot cheeks against the cool marble of the lattice.

Human nature is made up of contraries. Why, when we have had the courage coolly to plan murder, or to aid or suggest it, why must we be troubled with remorse? More than this, why must we battle against silly impulse to tell the first we meet what we have done? Remorse: what is it?

Now, this woman of the zenana believed not in the God of your fathers and mine. She was a pagan; her heaven and hell were ruled by a thousand gods, and her temples were filled with their images. Yet this thing remorse, was stabbing her with its hot needles, till no torture devised by man could equal it.

She was the poor, foolish woman who loved Durga Ram; loved him as these wild Asiatic women love, from murder to the poisoned cup. Loved him, and knew that he loved her not, but used her for his own selfish ends. There you have it. Had he loved her, remorse would have been a thing of

had not Umballa sought the white woman, this butterfly of the harem might have died of old age without unbending her soul. Remorse is the result of a crime committed uselessly. Humanity is unchangeable, for all its variety of skins.

And here was this woman, wanting to tell some one!

Umballa had done a peculiar thing: he had not laid hand upon either Ramabal or Pundita. When asked the reason for this generosity toward a man who but recently put a price on his head, Umballa smiled and explained that Ramabal was not only broken politically, but was a religious outcast. It was happiness for such a person to die, so he preferred that, Ramabal should live.

Secretly, however, Ramabal's revolutionary friends were still back of him, though they pretended to bow to the yoke of the priests.

So upon this day matters stood thus: the colonel, Kathlyn, Bruce and Winnie were prisoners again; Ahmed was in hiding; and Ramabal and his wife mocked by those who once had cheered them. The ingratitude of kings is as nothing when compared to the ingratitude of a people.

A most ridiculous country: to crown Kathlyn again (for the third time!) and then to lock her up! Next to superstition as a barrier to progress there stands custom. Everything one did must be done as some one else had done it; the initiative was still

ONE of the handsomest of the many beautiful lingerie blouses which have added so much to the beauty of apparel this summer, is very clearly pictured here. It is made of fine organdy and depends for its effectiveness upon the fineness of the fabric and the faultlessness of the work as well as upon a fine choice of lace and embroidery used in decorating.

The upper part of the blouse is cut in kimono fashion from a piece of the organdy tucked in squares, in tucks an eighth of an inch wide. A panel is set in at the back and front of the plain organdy. Cluny lace edging or some other equally good lace, is used in setting in these panels. The lower part of the blouse back and front is of the plain fabric.

chained up in the temples, it belonged to the bald priests only.

But Umballa had made two mistakes: he should have permitted the white people to leave the country and given a silken cord to the chief eunuch to apply as directed. There are no written laws among the dark peoples that forbid the disposal of that chattel known as a woman of the harem, or zenana. There are certain customs that even the all powerful British raj must ignore.

ery adorns it. The collar is finished with small embroidered scallops and the flower design, appearing on the waist elsewhere, is repeated here. The collar is wired with the finest of wire to support it at the back.

A waist cut on somewhat similar lines and made of figured voile is shown in the second picture. In this model all seams are joined with a piping of cord covered with the material. There is a vest of plain white net and a collar of net and lace. Pearl buttons fasten the vest and small bows of satin, matching the flower in the voile, add a pretty color note and a smart finish.

Both these models are finished at the waist line with a narrow belt which sets under the skirt. There is very little work on the blouse of voile but the daintiness of the fabric, showing lavender flowers on a white ground and the fineness of the plain net in vest and collar, produce an effect of elegance almost equal to that in the elaborate blouse of organdy.

Invited to Picnic.

The people who were invited to the picnic at Mineral Springs last week are invited to attend a picnic there Tuesday evening.

"CUPID'S VICTORY" FULL OF AMUSING SITUATIONS

Drummer Jones makes his annual trip West. He stays at the Thatch hotel, run by Louise's mother. Ike is janitor of the hotel. He and Louise are sweethearts.

After the trunk is placed in the drummer's room he unpacks his samples. Louise has been watching from her room. When she sees her way clear, she hides herself in the trunk. When Ike returns with the second trunk Louise informs him of her plan. Ike is to look it up, and they are to elope to the city.

All these preparations are made outside the drummer's door, who overhears the conversation, but pays no attention to it until he hears a disturbance in the office and inquires of its cause. In the meantime Ike has almost forgotten his last orders from Louise, "Not to forget her pet goat." Ike gets it and all three mount the train for the city.

At the hotel Louise is missed, and her parents are informed by the drummer of what he overheard. They get the sheriff and start in pursuit. On the train Ike, Louise and the goat are getting along fine until approached by the train newsboy. The goat decides to make a clean-up. As a result the boy and Ike get into a fight.

Louise has trouble with a strange man occupying the upper berth. At last everything rights itself and they arrive next morning in the city. A hotel porter thinks Ike and Louise are coming to his hotel and grabs their suit case. Ike gives chase with a gun. The old folks arrive and continue the chase. The goat gets sick and Louise and Ike start to take it to a hospital. On the way to the station they meet her mother and father and the sheriff. The sheriff claims Ike as his prisoner. Mother takes a hand and knocks the cop down, get the pair and starts on her way, leaving the cops much the

All at Sea.

Alice Moore prefers young Bob Chester. Father and mother can't seem to agree with her. The Moores are spending the summer at Venado Beach. Bob is at the nearby Tent City. At last the situation in the minds of Mr. and Mrs. Moore, becomes desperate, and they decide to take their daughter back to San Francisco. Alice determines to outwit them, and is secretly married to Bob. Alice's brother arrives. Then greeting is effusive. Bob is jealous.

The whole party leaves on ship-board for the northern city. Alice, angry that Bob doubted her love, will not tell who her brother is. Bob disguises as a steward to avoid her parents' wrath.

Complications galore arise. Brother is angered at the presumptuous steward and his sister's disgraceful flirtation with him. Mr. and Mrs. Moore suddenly discover the identity of the steward. Then trouble certainly does follow. At last, however, things come straight. The secret of the marriage comes out. Everybody is forgiven and the picture fades as the sun goes down.

Shown this evening at the opera house.

The Most Extraordinary Moving Picture Production of the Times

The Trey O' Hearts

If you've got a drop of red blood in your veins—if your heart beats one bit faster to the tune of romance—adventure—love and mystery—then you've something in store so far ahead of anything you've ever seen that you will never forget.

The Pictures The Universal Film Manufacturing Co., pronounced THE TREY O' HEARTS the best action story for film purposes they had seen in three years. They backed up their judgment by putting the punch and $200,000 cash into a set of pictures that are more than remarkable—they're simply extraordinary.

Won't Cost You One Red Penny You attend the movies—regularly. Instead of an ordinary film, you'll see graphically pictured by the best emotional actors and actresses in America—THE TREY O' HEARTS—a pace maker in pictures. So it won't cost you a nickel more to see it.

Mental Back Somersaults No matter how clever, you can't fathom the plot of THE TREY O' HEARTS one inch ahead of the scene you're viewing. It keeps you turning mental back somersaults all the way.

Full Reel Action in Every Foot The Universal Film Manufacturing Co., who are producing these films tell us that there is more action in every foot of THE TREY O' HEARTS than in a full reel of the ordinary scenario. And they should know. Thousands of scenarios go through their hands every year and they're investing $200,000 in putting THE TREY O' HEARTS on the screen. That's backing judgment. And their success in the moving picture business tells whether or not they know a good thing when they see it.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Simple Funeral Services for President's Wife

(By International News Service.)
Washington, Aug. 10.—Nearly 200 persons, including a congressional delegation, attend Mrs. Wilson's funeral services in the East room of the white house at 2 P. M. today. The services were simple throughout, the ritual following the Presbyterian tradition.
Rev. Sylvester Beach, of Princeton, officiated, assisted by Rev. James P. Taylor, of the Central Presbyterian church, Washington.
The family group included, besides the president, Secretary of Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, Miss Margaret Wilson, Prof. Stockton Axson, (Mrs. Wilson's brother), Joseph R. Wilson, George Howe and Edward Wilson. The funeral party departed for Rome, Ga., at 4:30 P. M.

The French troops took the village a place of nearly 4,000 inhabitants. The German forces retreated, pursued by the French troops in the direction of the great fortress of Muehlhausen.
The Alsatian natives were so delighted at the arrival of the French soldiers that they tore up the frontier posts.
In the extreme north the French from Nancy have clashed with the Germans at a point inside of Luxembourg. The war office claims a victory in the preliminary skirmishing and says the engagement has taken on the proportions of a general battle.
Muehlhausen is the second largest town of Alsace-Lorraine and is 61 miles to the south, southwest of Strassburg, the capital. It became a free city of the German empire in 1273; in the fifteenth century it entered into an alliance with the Swiss which lasted until 1793, when the city became French. It was taken from the French in September, 1870, and was ceded to Germany, with Alsace, in 1871.
Muehlhausen is garrisoned by a full infantry brigade, comprising about 9,000 men, and a full cavalry brigade of about 2,500. It has a population of about 100,000 and is the principal seat of cotton spinning in western Germany.

BELGIANS LOSE FORTS TO GERMANS

has been landed at Ekenas and is marching on Helsingfors, the capital of Finland.
The Germans have been opposed by Russian troops, but are persisting in the advance and it is expected that Helsingfors will be taken.
The movement is preliminary to a general invasion of Russia by Germany.
From Helsingfors to St. Petersburg there is a direct line of railway along which it is expected the Germans will advance.
Austrians Invade Russia.
St. Petersburg, Aug. 10.—Austrian troops crossed the Russian frontier near the Rumanian border Saturday and burned some villages.
The German fleet in the Baltic sea consists of at least 12 battleships of an old type, several cruisers and 24 torpedo boats, and has its base at Koenigsburg and Danzig. Up to the present none of the vessels has come northward to Libau.
The matter of objections of DuBois citizens to the granting permission to the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Ancient Order of Hibernians to use the auditorium of the DuBois High school for their sessions at the A. O. H. convention next week, was heard before Judge Bell this morning.
In June the school board of DuBois granted the ladies' auxiliary permission to occupy the auditorium. Subsequently protests against this action were made by the Knights of Malta and taxpayers. These protests were considered by the school board on Monday, August 3, and it was decided by the directors that they would not change their former action.
The petitioners then decided to take the matter before Judge Bell on the question of the legal right to permit a semi-sectarian organization to hold its meetings in a school building. Witnesses on both sides were examined by L. B. McCall, borough solicitor for the petitioners and J. P. O'Laughlin and James Gleason for the school directors.
At the conclusion of the testimony and the argument Judge Bell took the papers and will render a decision later.

QUESTION OF SCHOOL BOARD'S RIGHTS BEFORE JUDGE BELL

(By International News Service.)
Washington, Aug. 10.—Confirmation of the arrest and imprisonment of Arthur M. Huntington, president of the American Geographic society, and wife, by the German authorities was sent to the state department by Ambassador Herrick today.
Paris, Aug. 10.—The Huntingtons are confined to the Grand hotel, at Nurnberg. Herrick is negotiating for their release. No mention is made of alleged brutalities inflicted on them.
HEARING TESTIMONY IN CURWENSVILLE CASES
This afternoon testimony is being taken in the rehearing granted to Thomas Casey and Dorsey Griffith, of Curwensville, the hotel keepers, whose applications for liquor licenses were refused in March.
Messrs. Casey and Griffith asked the court sometime ago for a rehearing and Judge Bell, in order to give both sides an opportunity to be heard, set today at 1:30 for the taking of testimony. Witnesses are being heard as the Progress goes to press.
A large delegation of Curwensville people, a number of women among them, came down on the train and were interested spectators during the hearing.
Found Body in River.
Last winter a lumber jack disappeared at North Bend and yesterday his body was found in the river at Jersey Shore.

THE FRENCH AND GERMANS FIGHT

der the direction of the French officers who had been sent by the war office for that purpose. The troops will be hurried to Namur, where they are to aid the Belgians in making their second stand when Liege proves untenable.
The announcement that the British forces are actually on French soil has aroused the greatest enthusiasm. That French, Belgian and English soldiers are to fight shoulder to shoulder against the invading Germans means much to the French.
Italy is Threatened.
Rome, Aug. 10.—Germany and Austria threaten Italy with the declaration that the latter persists in its stand of neutrality they will consider themselves free to declare war and Austria will invade Venetia and Lombardy.
Four British Warships Sunk.
New York, Aug. 10.—Private cable advices received in New York report that a flotilla of German torpedo boats has attacked British warships in the Humber, the waterway to Hull, on the east coast of England sinking four of them. A number of the attacking German torpedo boats were lost.
German Cruiser Destroyed.
Paris, Aug. 10.—A dispatch published by the Petit Parisien says that the German cruiser Augsburg which bombarded the Russian port of Libau, has been sunk by a Russian torpedo boat. It carried 379 men.
Russians Capture Austrian Ships.
St. Petersburg, Aug. 10.—The Austrian merchant steamer Stella has been captured by Russian warships.
German Merchant Ship Captured.
Austrian Troops Retreat.
Nish, Serbia, Aug. 10.—The Austrian troops have evacuated Visegrad on the frontier of Novipazar. The Serbian troops immediately occupied the place.
Italians Take German Liners.
London, Aug. 10.—A dispatch from Milan to the Chronicle says that the Italian authorities at Genoa have seized two German trans-Atlantic vessels, the Moltke and the Koenig Albert. It is explained that the action was taken when the captains demanded a supply of coal though they already had coal aboard.
The Koenig Albert belongs to the North German-Lloyd line and sailed from New York, July 4, and arrived at Genoa July 17. The Moltke is a Hamburg-American liner. She left New York on July 15, arriving in Genoa on the 28th.
Germans March on France.
Brussels, Aug. 10.—Fifty thousand Germans departed today for Esch, Luxembourg and invaded France. A large percentage were fresh cavalry from Berlin.
Germany Claims Victory.
Berlin, Aug. 10.—The war office states:
"All preliminary aims have been accomplished. The Russian advance has been thrown back. The imperial army ready to advance, though General Von Emmich's forces are delayed at Liege. He won a glorious victory, capturing one thousand prisoners. The German losses were slight."
London, Aug. 10.—Dispatches to the Exchange Telegraph company today, announce that the kaiser formally took up a position with field forces at Aix-La-Chapelle.
The admiralty confirms the sinking of the German submarine U 15 while the latter was attempting to attack the British warships. The submarine's crew of 12 men were drowned. No details are made public.
Attempt to Delay French.
Paris, Aug. 10.—It is officially stated that the Germans are attempting to delay the French advances upon Metz by inundating the valley of River Seille, which flows along the frontier midway between Metz and the French fortress at Nancy.

COMMANDS GERMAN FLEET IN BATTLE WITH ENGLISH.

Grand Admiral Hans Ludwig-Reis-hund von Koester, head of the German navy, who is in command of the German North sea flotilla, reported to have had an encounter with the British.
The DuBois Courier tells the following interesting tale of a nunister and maid.
Rev. Mr. Smith, pastor of the Baptist church, at Sykesville, was traveling Saturday last and had occasion to stop at Falls Creek while changing cars for his destination. At the same time Miss Simmons, stenographer for the Falls Creek glass works, was also traveling, being headed for Clearfield, to visit friends over Sunday. The reverend gentleman and Miss Simmons were strangers to each other, but their suit case were exactly alike. While awaiting for their trains they set their traveling bags down in the station and strolled around.
When the Rev. Smith's train arrived he gathered up a suit case and departed. Miss Simmons did likewise. When the reverend reached his destination to fill a Sunday appointment he opened his suit case and was considerably surprised to find it filled with women's waiving apparel, including the fixings and things usually found in a young lady's outfit, and none of which he had any use for at that time. Being rather modest and somewhat embarrassed he closed up the case and started the telephone working back to Falls Creek.
Miss Simmons arrived safely at Clearfield carrying the preacher's suit case and Sunday outfit, which she soon discovered after her arrival. She did not know whose baggage she had hypothecated, but she did know she had connected with it at Falls Creek station. Hence she also hurried to a telephone booth and for the next half hour kept the lines hot between Clearfield and Falls Creek. Before evening the mixup in suit cases was cleared up and everybody happy.
